Roosevelt Tells Farley His 3d Term Decision But Both Keep Secret

Future of Party, Need for Brief Platform Discussed In 2-Hour Parley

By the Associated Press

Hyde Park, N. Y., July 7.—President Roosevelt has made his historic decision on the third term issue.

He disclosed it today to James A. Farley, National Democratic chairman. But Farley would not say whether Mr. Roosevelt had determined to attempt to shatter the third term precedent or leave the White House next January.

Farley told reporters:

"I had a very satisfactory talk with the President and I have full knowledge of his thoughts and what he has in mind. But I will not discuss it with any individual."

Nor would Farley give any hint when Mr. Roosevelt might reveal what he was going to do about a third term. He said it was up to the President to make the announcement at the time of his choosing. The President left tonight for Washington.

Discuss All Phases

Farley fended off every effort by reporters to learn whether the third term announcement would come before the Democratic Convention, opening in Chicago a week from tomorrow, or whether the delegates would know the President's views in advance.

Farley said he and the President had gone into every phase of the "present-day political situation and the future of the party," but that any additional comment must come from Mr. Roosevelt.

He did add, however, that he felt that "the people of this country want to retain the Democratic Party in power," that he had felt that way all along and still did.

"Will you continue to work to that end?" he was asked.

But Farley dodged that one by brushing it aside as a leading question. Today's papers carried stories he would resign as Democratic chairman and Postmaster General to become President of the New York Yankee baseball team.

Silent on Own Future

Although he declined to give any clew to the President's intentions, Farley said nothing to subtract from the views of many Democratic leaders that there were increasing indications Mr. Roosevelt would break with tradition and agree to be drafted for a third term.

More than two-thirds of the convention delegates are pledged or semipledged to a third term and Mr. Roosevelt's nomination apparently is assured if he wants it.

Farley himself is a candidate for the nomination, and has a few delegates pledged to him. But when he was asked today whether his name still would go before the convention, he avoided an answer again.

Farley faced a barrage of questions in the temporary White House offices following his two-hour parley with "the boss."

Talked of Platform

He was silent on his own political future. He said he did not want to comment now on "that very nice story" about his taking over the Yankees. Sometime during the convention, he said, he will announce what he intends to do.

He and the President, Farley said, talked with utter frankness.

"I think I have full knowledge of what he proposes to do," Farley asserted. "But that is up to him to discuss."

He said he and the President had conversed about the Democratic platform and that he hoped it would be short.

"I'll start off by saying I discussed with the President the plans

Willkie Visits Capital Today To Pick Aides

Candidate Expected To Announce Choice Of Campaign Chiefs

Wendell Willkie, leader of the 1940 Republican hosts, is to visit the Capital today and before he departs tomorrow the personnel of the top campaign directorate is expected to be made known.

Making the trip here to confer with his running mate, Senator Charles L. McNary, of Oregon, the Presidential nominee will be guest of honor tonight at a dinner to be attended by the Republican members of Congress.

At his conference with McNary tonight, final decision will be reached as to whether a national chairman will direct the election campaign, as has been the custom, or a group, probably of three members, will be designated.

There were indications last night, it was reported in political circles, that the idea of a group may be abandoned, with reliance placed on a single campaign manager, acting in conjunction with Willkie and the advisory committee of 12 he already has chosen for the duration of the campaign.

Willkie will be met at the airport this afternoon by a committee of Republicans from Congress. Arrangements for tonight's dinner have been in the hands of House Minority Leader Martin, of Massachusetts. From here Willkie will fly to Denver for a vacation before delivering his acceptance speech at Elwood, Ind.

Democrats, meanwhile, were moving on Chicago, scene of the party's national convention opening next Monday. Col. Edwin Halsey, secretary of the Senate and sergeant at arms for the convention, arrived at Chicago yesterday and the Washington headquarters staff of the Democratic National Committee likewise moved to the convention city.

With a rough draft of the platform already prepared, following numerous night meetings at the White House, Senator Wagner, of New York, who will be chairman of the resolutions committee, will go to the

French Planes Join Attack On Gibraltar

Two Air Squadrons, Rearmed, Help Nazis And Italians in Raid

By the Associated Press

Grenoble, France, July 7.—Two French air squadrons, disarmed by the armistice, have been rearmed and have joined German and Italian squadrons in attacks on Gibraltar, the French navy ministry disclosed today.

[A government spokesman at Vichy said, however, that although diplomatic relations with Britain have been broken, France has planned no hostilities.

[Gibraltar dispatches said that for the third successive day a lone raider was chased off, but dispatches from La Linea, Spain, said planes "believed French" heavily bombed Gibraltar again Sunday morning, and apparently struck one destroyer in the bay.

[Destroyers are constantly patrolling Gibraltar waters against submarines, the dispatch said, and the aircraft carrier Ark Royal arrived today apparently to help com-

French to Dare British Warships In West Indies

Aruba, Netherlands West Indies, July 7 (AP).—The 2,400-ton French auxiliary cruiser Esterel took French shore troops and equipment aboard today, and left Aruba for a dash through British patrols in an attempt to reach Martinique.

[Anglo-French units were dispatched to the Netherlands West Indies in May following the Dutch surrender to Germany in order to protect vital oil refineries.

[Within the last three days British warships have been reported standing off Martinique to prevent the French aircraft carrier Bearn, 22,000 tons, from escaping to France with 100 planes purchased in the United States.]

War Reaches America

Nervous Flier Sinks U-Boat Off Canada, Refugees Told

By the Associated Press

New York, July 7.—Passengers arriving today on the British liner Scythia said they were told at Halifax that a Canadian bomber recently had sighted two German submarines off the Nova Scotian coast and had sunk one of them.

Henry Durant, head of the British Institute of Public Opinion, an affiliate of the Gallup Poll, declared he and other passengers were informed of the bomber's exploit by "officials at Halifax."

Durant said the officials told him further that "the bomber pilot was so nervous after the bombing he cracked up his plane in landing." He did not say when the action took place.

The Scythia docked with 344 passengers, most of them war refugees, including 71 children—the first group of the planned mass migration of youngsters from England to temporary homes in the United States. Eighty other children debarked at Halifax.

Most of the children were accompanied either by parents, other relatives or friends, and arrangements for their reception had been made well in advance of their sailing.

Among the passengers were Stefan Zweig, the author, and Carl Brisson.

Bombs Rain On England All Sunday

At Least Five Killed By German Raids; British Ignite Nazi Oil Stores in Bergen

By the Associated Press

London (Monday), July 8.—Thousands of Englishmen who sought peace and quiet on week-end jaunts to the country found instead that they were unbidden witnesses to a deadly phase of the Battle for England—a daylong series of German bombing raids that lasted through Sunday until early today.

British fighter planes and anti-aircraft guns shot down at least four of the enemy in flames off the southeast coast. One British plane was lost.

At least five persons [the United Press said 10] were killed by the German bombs, and a number suffered injuries. Homes were splintered, and delayed-action missiles added a new peril.

Engage British Fighters

The German planes penetrated the English coastal defenses in small groups, then split up into still smaller units of three or four and engaged in spectacular dogfights with British pilots.

The Times meanwhile said the Air Ministry reckoned that "40 German airplanes have been brought down in the past fortnight and that some 2,500 in all have been destroyed by British forces alone since the war began."

"It was calculated on Friday that 74 Italian airplanes had been destroyed, mostly in air fights, since Italy entered the war. In addition 30 had been heavily damaged and probably out of commission."

In air fights far inland, a German bomber and a lighter plane were believed seriously damaged. They fought their way back toward the coast, shaken by shells from ground batteries and "hotly pursued by British defense planes.

German Territory Raided

Indicating that the British were not letting these German blows go unanswered in kind, the German radio stations at Hamburg and Bremen suddenly went silent Sunday night—as they do when British bombers draw near.

Yesterday, Admiralty and air ministry communiques reported fleet air arm and Royal Air Force planes had made half a dozen raids on German and German-held territory over Saturday night.

Naval dive bombers blasted German oil and gasoline stores at Bergen, Norway, while R. A. F. Blenheims struck for the second night in a row at Germany's Kiel Canal, and the Bruensbuttel naval base at its entrance. Airdromes in Belgium, France, and the Nether-

Hitler, Ciano Plan Next Steps of Axis

Germans Bomb British Warships, Submarine, Berlin Claims

By the Associated Press

Berlin, July 7.—Adolf Hitler and Count Galeazzo Ciano, Italy's foreign minister, conferred for two hours today, presumably mapping the course of the Rome-Berlin Axis in its remaking of Europe.

As the leaders talked in the Fuehrer's chancellery workroom, the high command reported German planes crippled two British destroyers so severely in the North Sea that they must be regarded as lost, damaged a 10,000-ton cruiser and sank a submarine and two smaller war vessels as well as striking successfully at British merchant ships.

There were no details of the policymakers' conversation beyond a short communique which said German Foreign Minister von Ribbentrop was present along with the partners' ambassadors, Italian Count Dino Alfieri and German Hans Georg Viktor von Mackensen.

Ciano was believed to be particularly interested in the new situation created by hostilities between British and French fleet units and new signs of tension in southeastern Europe.

Leaves for Front

Ciano left tonight by special train to visit scenes of the western campaign. He was expected to be gone two days and to return to Berlin Wednesday for further conversations.

[The United Press sugugested the possibility that the rumored "big push" against Britain would be delayed until the Hitler-Ciano conversations have been completed.]

Meanwhile, besides the air forays on British seapower and shipping lanes, the high command reported a 6,000-ton steamer sunk by a Nazi speedboat near the Isle of Wight, in the English Channel just off Southampton and Portsmouth, important British harbors.

A second merchantman, it said, an 8,000-ton vessel, was set afire by air bombs in the Harbor of Falmouth.

The submarine sank after being heavily damaged by air attack and its crew has been "picked up by German patrol boats and planes," the communique said.

It contrasted continued, successful Nazi "attacks on important military objectives in the south of England" with "insignificant damage" caused by British night raids on northern Germany.

Two Hours of Anxiety

'Torpedoed' U. S. Destroyer Safe in Port; Fake S O S Probed

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

SINKING DENIED—An S O S reporting that the U. S. destroyer Barry had been torpedoed caused anxiety yesterday

A false S O S message that the United States destroyer Barry had been "hit by German submarine" and was slowly sinking caused two hours of anxiety in Washington yesterday.

Navy officials hastily checked on the call and were finally able to remove all concern by announcing:

"The Navy has received a communication directly from the Barry. She is not in distress but is peacefully at anchor in a neutral European port."

Last night the Federal Communications Commisison and the FBI had taken up the task of seeking the origin of the fake distress call.

Picked up by Mackay Radio, the S O S said:

"Sinking slowly, hit by German submarine; water in hold; can last three hours." The position given was 400 miles off the coast of Spain.

Doubt was cast upon the authenticity of the S O S from the start by the fact that it came in, not on the Barry's own wave length but upon 55 meters—that reserved for the transatlantic clipper planes.

Mackay, which said the message did not come from any clipper, attempted at once to verify the report through the U. S. liner Manhattan, due to reach Lisbon tomorrow. Word came back from the liner that it had been in communication with the U. S. S. Trenton, also in those waters, and that the latter knew nothing of the report.

While Mackay was trying to reach the Barry directly, the Navy's own radio system succeeded in that purpose, with its denial of the report following.

While the Barry recently was reported to be at Bilbao, Spain, the Navy declined to say where she was anchored, explaining that such information was not given out under present-day conditions.

2 D. C. Students Shot As Mexico Votes; 100 Die, Thousands Hurt

Two Other Capital Youths Escape Blaze of Gunfire In Street Battle

Two Georgetown University students and another American youth were wounded and two Washington boys escaped unhurt when they innocently strolled into a political dispute during yesterday's balloting at Mexico City.

Leonard Durso, 18, of Union City, N. J., a student in the Georgetown Foreign Service School, was shot in the side in a riot near the Fine Arts Palace. At Green Cross Hospital, Mexico City, his condition was reported serious.

Attache's Son Shot

Ivan Hasslocher, 19, of 3518 Quesada street northwest, son of Paulo G. Hasslocher, commercial attache of the Brazilian Embassy, was slightly injured by a pistol bullet which grazed his back. His condition was reported not serious.

Edward J. Mallen, jr., 28, of Davenport, Iowa, was shot in the stomach. He was in critical condition.

The two youths who escaped the sudden blaze of gunfire without a scratch were Francis E. Maloney, jr., 20, of 3005 McKinley street northwest, and Parkman Clancy, 19, of 1013 Flower avenue, Takoma Park, Md.

Reports reaching the State Department from the American Consulate in Mexico City were that Durso, Hasslocher, Maloney and Clancy, all Georgetown students, were walking together, Mallen was alone when he was shot down near the Central Postoffice.

The four Georgetown students, with Andrew Jackson, 17, of 1825 New Hampshire avenue northwest left Washington by automobile, June 1, to enter summer school at the University of Mexico for a term ending in September. Apparently Jackson was not with his fellow students yesterday. Last August 6, young Jackson was shot above the heart while inspecting a revolver at his home.

Dr. Edmund A. Walsh, S. J., head of the Georgetown Foreign Service School, said last night many students from the United States had gone to Mexican and South American colleges this year, those in Europe being closed to them by the war.

Britain Orders All Actors, 18-31, Home for War Duty

The British government, through the embassy here, yesterday called on all English stage, screen, and radio performers between 18 and 31 to return to the homeland as soon as possible.

But a quick check-up revealed that Richard Greene is the lone Hollywood star affected by the mobilization. Most of the outstanding British film figures in Hollywood are over the age limit. If the military age should be increased to 50, however, as in the last war, the call to arms would reach Laurence Olivier, 33; Robert Donat, 35; Cary Grant, 36; Brian Aherne, 38; Ian Hunter, 40; Charles Laughton, 41; Raymond Massey, 44; Leslie Howard, 47; Sir Cedric Hardwicke, 47; Basil Rathbone, 48, and Ronald Colman, 49.

Roosevelt Supports Hull In Japan Blast

Stresses Difference Between True Monroe Doctrine, False Policies

Special Dispatch to The Post

Hyde Park, N. Y., July 7.—President Roosevelt today placed himself completely in harmony with Secretary of State Hull's denunciation, uttered last Friday, of Japan's newly asserted "Monroe Doctrine for Asia."

The President made known his stand in remarks supplementary to those he had given reporters Saturday suggesting that the nations of Europe, Asia and the Americas each should consult and decide on the administration and disposition of conquered areas in their respective continents and hemispheres.

To some it appeared from the manner in which the remarks were reported that the United States might be preparing to accept Japan's new policy in East Asia.

However, on Friday, in a statement, Secretary Hull, obviously referring to Japan, had denounced "policies which appear to be arising in other geographical areas of the world, which are alleged to be similar to the Monroe Doctrine, but which, instead of resting on the sole policies of self-defense and of respect for existing sovereignties, as does the Monroe Doctrine, would in reality seem to be only the pretext for the carrying out of conquest by the sword, of military occupation and of complete economic and political domination by cer-

Machine Guns, Bombs and Rifles Take Heavy Toll In Polls Clashes

By the Associated Press

Mexico City, July 7.—Mexico counted 100 or more slain and thousands injured, including two seriously wounded United States citizens, as rival political factions matched gunfire with each other and with soldiers and police today in the blazing, riotous climax to a bitter presidential campaign.

While the casualties mounted, with the greatest number in Mexico City itself, the count of ballots will not be made until next Thursday. It then remains for the government to decide whether results will be announced before the official figures are presented to the Congress that meets September 1.

Both Gen. Avila Camacho, the candidate backed by the present administration, and his rival, Gen. Juan Andreu Almazan, claimed certain victory, while their followers did bloody battle around the polling places.

Last of the serious clashes in Mexico City came tonight when soldiers fought with thousands of Almazan partisans who gathered around the candidate's headquarters.

As the crowd melted away on appears from its leaders, a heavy downpour of rain put an end to further mass disorders.

Georgetown Student Shot

The estimate of more than 100 dead came from Gen. Almazan. Mexico City police said a score of persons died and 100 were injured in this capital alone, and the toll was expected to go higher. Shootings were reported from various other cities, although in the north, near the United States border, the election was comparatively quiet.

The wounded Americans were Edward J. Mellen, jr., of Davenport, Iowa, shot through the stomach, and believed to be near death, and Leonard Durso, 18, a Georgetown University student, of Union City, N. J., who suffered a rifle bullet in the left side. Both were shot in riots in the heart of the Capital.

Ivan Hasslocher, son of the commercial attache of the Brazilian Embassy in Washington, received a slight flesh wound in the back in the same clash in which Durso was shot.

Two Leaders Dead

Francis E. Maloney, jr., of 3005 McKinley street, Washington, D. C., and Parkman Clancy, of 1013 Flower avenue, Takoma Park, Md., also Georgetown students, accompanied the injured youths. Both escaped the flying bullets.

Rifles, pistols, machine guns, hand grenades and tear gas bombs were used freely in the fighting in Mexico City and the federal district.

Headquarters of Gen. Almazan announced that the dead included Col. Vicente Obregon, former director of mails and telegraphs, and former Gen. Melchor Gonzales, and blamed Camacho followers for their slaying.

President Cardenas, whose administration is backing Camacho, toured polling places during the day, frequently exchanging banter with Almazan followers, who crowded around and stopped his car. He declined to make a statement as the voting ended, however.

Thousands Turn Out

At one point the President's car was surrounded by a crowd of Almazan followers, who demanded good-naturedly that he cheer their candidate.

Despite the very real danger of moving about on the streets and going to the polls, citizens turned out by the thousands, and the impression gained at various voting places was that thousands of them

Death Takes the Wheel

Child and Woman Are Killed, 8 Hurt in Week-End Traffic

A child and a woman were dead and eight persons lay in hospitals last night, victims of week-end traffic on highways near Washington.

Five-year-old Mildred Nalley, of La Plata, Md., died at Providence Hospital yesterday of injuries suffered when she fell from an automobile and was dragged under its wheels in Charles County, Md. Police said the automobile was driven by Mildred's grandmother, Mrs. Mary Edna Gray, of Bel Alton, Md., who was backing from the driveway of her home when the child fell out of the vehicle and under its rear wheels.

Mrs. Elizabeth Farrell, 29, who lived with her parents at 1235 Morse street southeast, died yesterday at Casualty Hospital after the automobile in which she was riding left the road and crashed into a pole on Defense highway near Capitol Heights, Md. Mrs. Farrell, former clerk in the Department of Agriculture, suffered a skull fracture.

Injured in the same crash were Mrs. Farrell's husband, Charles Farrell, 26, of 7305 Georgetown road, Bethesda, Md., and Evelyn Honey, 16, her sister. Neither was seriously hurt.

In an accident near Mount Harmony, Md., details of which could not be determined immediately,

Consequently, old figures on production charts are being erased and new, larger figures inserted.

But there's a crying need for daily telegraphic production reports on important items to some centralized office in Washington, so there will be a clear picture of daily progress.

NOTE OF GLEE: I won a bet on the nomination of Willkie. It was a modest sum, and the money doesn't matter so much as does the fact that Bascom Timmons, the eminent Texan from whom I won it, boasts that he won all 246 of his election wagers in 1936, something of a record.

LAST PRESIDENT?: One charming lady here must be watching events with considerably more than average interest.

She came to the Capital in the early days of the New Deal, when the atmosphere was somewhat chaotic, and was transfixed by a weird and oppressive fear.

"—not so willing as Willkie"

Her fixed idea—which she confided to a few friends—was that Roosevelt would be the last American President. Her friends scoffed affectionately. As things quieted a little after 1934 her apprehension faded.

Now she has almost—but not quite—forgotten it.

* * * *

UNWILLING V. P.: Privately Senator McNary is probably the most unwilling nominee for Vice President we have had in a long time. In corridor chats at the Capitol he says he is still unreconciled to it, and there is a hint that one of the first voters Willkie must win over to enthusiasm is his own running mate.

* * * *

RUSSIAN MODERNE: Probably the most modern note of decor in any embassy here is that new modernistic furniture of white birch in the office of Ambassador Oumansky at the U. S. S. R. mansion on Sixteenth street. Other embassies run pretty much to chaste classical furniture.

* * * *

The desk, tables, chairs and sofas were shipped from Russia, and the freight alone must have cost $600. The pieces are more massive than most modern furniture, of a light speckled yellowish wood, from the great endless white birch forests over which you fly interminably on the way from Berlin to Moscow.

* * * *

HEROIC IDEAS: From across the land ideas keep pouring in to the Government offices, some of them quaint.

One amateur strategist in California wants the United States to ship troops to Europe via Alaska and Siberia.

An old lady in Maine thinks American courage would get a shot in the arm if the newspapers would serialize Carl Sandburg's 2,500-page "Lincoln."

"—a Yank spy gets the dope"

SPIES URGED: Quite a few patriots are convinced that it's time for this country to abandon its old antipathy for sending spies into foreign countries with which we're not at war.

They think that a little more advance information would save us a lot of trouble.

DOUGLAS AGAIN: For the moment the election seems to be playing second fiddle to national defense. But as the Democratic convention approaches, you hear Justice Douglas' name mentioned oftener and oftener around here for V. P., ultimately to succeed Roosevelt. The White House troops say he's even homespunner than Willkie.

* * * *

SECRET OR NOT?: Between various of our Army and Navy offices there seems to be a difference of opinion as to what's a secret and what isn't.

I pursued the same information through four different War Department offices. In two of them it was earmarked "secret and not available."

In the other two it was released freely, for publication.

Sometimes I suspect that "secret information" is information that the bureau simply doesn't have handy.

Congress Week Cut Short By Democratic Convention

House Action Due Before Thursday Recess on Hatch Bill

Affairs of defense must share with politics the interest on Capitol Hill beginning today, as a short Congressional week is opened prior to the Democratic national convention next week.

Legislators plan to recess Thursday until after Democrats have nominated their 1940 ticket, and agreed on the platform on which it will stand.

But before the recess is taken, the House is expected to act on the Hatch bill, extending restriction on political activities to federally-paid State employes and placing a limit of $5,000 on individual campaign fund contributions. The measure, already passed by the Senate, is due to be brought up in the other chamber tomorrow.

On defense lines, the week is slated to be an important one.

The Senate today is expected to act favorably on President Roosevelt's nominations of Col. Frank Knox and Henry L. Stimson to be Secretaries of the Navy and War, respectively, though considerable debate is in prospect.

Senate May Act on Navy Bill

Senate approval of the $4,000,000,000 naval expansion bill, already passed by the House, is another prerecess goal.

The week likely will bring from the President a message recommending an additional $5,000,000,000 in appropriations and authorizations for defense; $4,000,000,000 for tanks armored trucks, planes and similar equipment for the Army, and $1,000,000,000 for more planes and ships for the Navy.

Mr. Roosevelt, who is returning from a holiday at Hyde Park, N. Y., also may send to Congress this week a message or letter regarding proposals for compulsory selective training and service. The Senate Military Affairs Committee now has before it the Burke-Wadsworth compulsory training bill, and hearings will be resumed tomorrow, when a War Department spokesman, probably Gen. George C. Marshall, Army chief of staff, will present the War Department's views.

In connection with the mounting expenditures for defense, the Associated Press said yesterday it was reported that a new $1,000,000,000 annual increase in taxes may be proposed, on top of the $1,000,000,000 boost recently voted.

Billion in New Taxes Needed

It quoted Senator George (Democrat), Georgia, a member of the Senate Finance Committee, as saying it was his understanding that this huge new defense request would be linked with a tax increase of $1,000,000,000, although it was uncertain whether the President would allude in his message to the financing of the new program.

George said he thought a maximum of $350,000,000 additional could be raised by excess profits taxes on corporations, which the President already has suggested to Congress. The remaining $650,000,000, he predicted, would have to be obtained from individuals and through miscellaneous sources.

"In my judgment," the Georgia Senator told reporters, "we are going to have to start work right away on the skeleton of a tax bill. It will have to be based on a thorough-going revision of the tax system and it probably will take months to do the job right."

Attempt to Attack Arita Fails; Japan Hunts Nationalists

Tokyo (Monday), July 8 (U.P.).—Police today began a roundup of ultra-nationalist agitators, following an incident last night during which a nationalist agent attempted to attack Foreign Minister Arita.

Arita's assailant was identified as Morio Sato, 26, president of the Fukuoka division of the ultra-nationalist Tohokai political party. Police believed, however, that he was a minor figure and was acting for powerful personages who have been attacking the foreign minister because of his refusal to enter a military alliance with Germany.

Arita was assailed while addressing a mass meeting celebrating the third anniversary of the beginning of the Chinese-Japanese war.

Tomorrow, actual moving from the old quarters at 472 Indiana avenue northwest will get under way. The shift is expected to be completed by the end of the week.

Defense Program Gets Credit For Business Spurt in June

Commerce Department Expects Uptrend to Continue, Regardless of What Happens Abroad; Nearly All Lines Gain

Copyright by New York Times

A firm business upturn in the United States in June in the face of catastrophic events abroad was attributed in a Commerce Department report yesterday to favorable prospects engineered by the national defense program.

Business purchasing expanded in June and consumer buying improved. The stock market regained a small part of the heavy losses recorded in May. Commodity prices were firmer, but the statement pointed out that, with farm prices still low and export markets curtailed, domestic business is not yet secure against European developments.

However, whatever happens, the United States will go on arming so "interruptions to the rising trend of production, such as a quick termination of the war or readjustments of a technical character, should be of less importance than was formerly the case," the report stated.

Steel Orders Continue to Rise

Steel ordering continued in expanded volume in June and new orders in nonferrous metals industries rose further in June, after the large rise in May. Total orders received by railroad equipment firms were again on the upgrade, as all indications pointed to a continued rise in freight traffic. Machinery orders were reported to be in good volume. Purchasing also spread to the nondurable industries.

Activity in the construction industry continued, with private contracts in May and the early part of June up enough to raise total awards above the 1939 period. Residential awards in May were the highest of any months since 1929.

Commercial and industrial building has been on a rising trend since late in 1939. Plant expansion work now on drawing boards, but not yet under contract, is the largest in many years.

Coal, Petroleum Ease Off

Substantial gains in industrial production were recorded in June. Steel ingot production rose from 76.9 per cent of capacity at the end of May to 86.5 per cent at the week ended June 29. For most industries other than steel more appreciable gains were made in June than in the previous month.

Bituminous coal and crude petroleum output continued to ease off from the high production rate of the winter and late spring, but generally production was on a rising trend. In the armament producing industries an expansion was under way although the full impact of the defense program is still to come.

Activity at textile mills was generally moved up in June. Output of electric power recovered in June to about February levels.

The automobile industry reduced assemblies as the model year approached its close. Output declined more than seasonally in both May and June.

tain powers of other free and independent peoples."

Today Stephen T. Early, Presidential secretary, told reporters the President wished to emphasize "the difference between Monroe Doctrines under the name only and the true Monroe Doctrine as we know it and have it."

The President had given careful attention to papers which reported today his remarks of yesterday, it was said.

Early mentioned no countries by name, but apparently he referred to Japan when he spoke of "what appear to us to be false Monroe doctrines."

"There hasn't been any sign or evidence of a real or true Monroe Doctrine in other hemispheres than our own yet," Early said.

already perfected for the Chicago convention and the detailed plans that still must be perfected," he said.

"I also discussed with him the kind of platform and size of the platform I hope will be adopted.

"Every effort will be made to conduct a dignified convention with no by-plays or frivolities of any character—a convention that will be free of all criticism."

"Does the third term come under the heading of by-plays," a reporter inquired.

Farley grinned and said he hadn't heard the question.

Urges Brief Platform

He declined to elaborate on the type of platform he thought should be adopted, except to recommend brevity.

"The shorter the better," he commented. "The people will read a short one and not a long one."

Farley returned to New York after his press conference and said he would leave for Chicago tomorrow night. He told reporters that what he said today would be his first and final statement on his conference with the President.

"Doesn't that leave the delegates uncertain whether the President will or will not run?" he was asked.

"That is a question that only the President can answer," Farley responded, "and certainly I do not have the right to presume to speak for him."

"Will yur name go before the convention?" was the next question.

"I won't even answer that," Farley retorted.

"Are you going to continue on as national chairman."

"I'll discus any future plans I may have with regard to party activities at the Chicago convention."

Farley said he did not want to get into any political aspects of the appointment of two Republicans, Frank Knox and Henry L. Stimson, to the Cabinet.

When a reporter, recalling a recent Farley speech, asked whether the Democratic chairman still put country above the good of the party, Farley replied he always had.

The Associated Press said last night that to offset McNary's conceded appeal in the agricultural areas—he was a coauthor of the famous McNary-Haugen Farm Relief Bill, which was vetoed twice by Republican administrations—some party leaders were suggesting Secretary Wallace or Chester C. Davis for the Democratic Vice Presidential nomination.

Wallace has headed the Agriculture Department throughout the Roosevelt Administration. Davis, formerly agricultural adjustment administrator, is now a member of the board of governors of the Federal Reserve System, and of the President's defense commission.

Some of Wallace's associates said they expected his name to be put before the convention for the Vice Presidential nomination, unless President Roosevelt should indicate a preference for the nomination to go to someone else.

Garner Opens Quarters

By the United Press

Chicago, July 7.—Vice President Garner took the lead in preconvention activities today with the opening of headquarters for his campaign for the Presidential nomination at the Democratic Party's $10,000,000 show which opens here July 15.

A vanguard of his campaign staff, transferred here from Dallas, Tex., tacked up "Go With Garner" placards in a mezzanine suite at the Sherman Hotel and announced they were ready for business. Outwardly, however, a stranger wouldn't know that the convention, which will bring some 100,000 visitors to the city, was only a week away.

Richard Tullis, of San Antonio, coordinator of the Garner campaign, said Cochairmen E. B. Germany and Mrs. Clara Driscoll would arrive tomorrow.

A group of Chicago businessmen, led by Leonard H. Vaughn, chairman, continued activities to promote Gov. Lloyd C. Stark of Missouri for the Vice Presidential nomination. Vaughn said Gov. John E. Miles of New Mexico, who will be chairman of his State delegation, and Teller Ammons, former Governor of Colorado, had expressed favor for Stark. Previously he had announced indorsement of Stark by former Gov. Leslie Miller of Wyoming, and Gov. Robert T. Jones of Arizona, both heads of their State delegations.

Federal Security Administrator Paul V. McNutt, reserved expansive quarters at the Stevens Hotel, but it wasn't known whether he would set up a staff.

Headquarters will be opened this week for Senator Wheeler, of Montana.

New York, July 7 (INS).—Wendell L. Willkie this afternoon held a long conference with John D. M. Hamilton, Republican national chairman, discussing plans for the forthcoming campaign.

The Republican Presidential nominee and Hamilton, whose role in the campaign has not been made known, were in session for nearly three hours.

Ordnance Expert Advises President On War Materials

By the Associated Press

An expert on guns, shells and explosives, who has furnished munitions to every branch of the Army, is the guardian of America's war materials.

Lieut. Col. Russell L. Maxwell, ordnance officer of the General Staff Corps, has opened a new office as Administrator of Export Control. From there, he will advise the President in the use of broad powers to stop the shipment out of the United States of a long list of military supplies and "strategic materials" necessary to defense.

Maxwell steps into his new post after hectic months of handling problems of national rearmament as a confidental adviser to Louis Johnson, Assistant Secretary of War. Johnson controlled much of the purchasing and routing of supplies for the Nation's new Army.

Guns His Career

A pleasant, round-faced man who works in the same small office with his aides, Maxwell has made a career of ordnance—the business of designing, obtaining and distributing the weapons with which wars are fought.

He has served on the staffs of infantry, cavalry, field artillery and aviation units. His latest "field" assignment was as ordnance expert on the staff of the general headquarters air corps at Langley Field, Va. In his liaison work for Johnson, Maxwell had opportunity, too, to learn much about the Navy's armament problems.

Still one of the younger staff officers of the Army at 49, Maxwell was in one of the first groups of officers to graduate from the Army Industrial College established in 1925 for study of the problems of industrial mobilization. He also is a graduate of the Command and General Staff School and of the Army War College—top graduate school for military men.

Out of West Point at 21

Born in Oakdale, Ill., Maxwell graduated from West Point at 21 and began his service as a second lieutenant of the Field Artillery. Three years later, he transferred to the Ordnance Department of the Army. He commanded the Picatinny Arsenal in New Jersey during the World War. As an officer of the Army of Occupation after the armistice, he commanded a munition plant and an ammunition depot in Germany for two years.

Ordnance posts in Philadelphia and Texas and at headquarters here brought him in 1938 to the combination post of executive officer to Johnson and chief of the planning and equipment branch, G-4, War Department general staff.

Maxwell's family, living in nearby rural Vienna, Va., is a military household. His wife is the daughter of Maj. Gen. Edwin B. Winans, retired; and two sons are Army lieutenants. The second of Maxwell's sons showed his father's interest in modern machines of war by applying for training as a flier.

In his new post, Maxwell serves as a staff officer for the President. He will furnish the military view on what goods should be barred from export, and will cooperate with the State Department's division of control in seeing that needed materials are conserved for American use.

Congressmen Debate G. O. P. Poll Chances

Dirksen, Crawford, Smith and Hobbs Speak on Broadcast

Around Wendell Willkie's personality, and his affiliations with big business, four Congressmen last night argued the chances of Republican success in the forthcoming election. They spoke on the American Forum of the Air broadcast over the Mutual Broadcasting System.

Indulging in the debate were Republican Representatives Everett M. Dirksen, of Illinois, and Fred L. Crawford, of Michigan, against Representative-at-Large T. V. Smith, of Illinois, and Representative Sam Hobbs (Democrat), of Alabama. Chairman was Theodore Granik.

Representative Smith touched off the debate with the statement that "the declared Republican principles are but a rehash of what it has taken the Democrats eight years to make acceptable doctrine . . . Temperamentally, Mr. Willkie is a miniature Franklin Roosevelt."

Declaring he was "miniature" advisedly, Representative Smith said he believed Willkie's training excellent for business, but that it had not fitted him for politics.

Representative Crawford's opinion was that "Nominee Willkie is not a politician, therefore, he will be engaged in rebuilding the physical and moral forces of this Nation instead of just playing politics. That is what the people expect and will get from him—and they will like it."

The same factors that elected a dynamic personality in 1932 are working to elect a new leader this year, Representative Dirksen said. He pointed out that the Nation wants a change, and that a new trend is at hand with Wendell Willkie as its spearhead.

"After making due allowance for the many good things which the Administration has accomplished, the primary problems of unemployment, low farm prices, business stagnation, debt and taxes are still here," he said. "People will be seeking a leader, who in his own field of private endeavor has evidenced remarkable results in behalf of the thousands for whom he has served as a leader and trustee."

In remarks largely caustic, Representative Hobbs drawled, "We grew hard with Harding, cool with Coolidge, hungry with Hoover, but everything has grown rosy with Roosevelt."

Wheeler Injures Foot Playing Golf

Senator Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, injured a foot yesterday playing golf at the Columbia Country Club with his son, Edward.

It was believed that the Senator had pulled a ligament or broken a small bone of the foot when he slipped on an embankment. An X-ray will be taken today. Last night, the legislator was using a cane.

Report Urges U. S.-Russian Pact on China

The Foreign Policy Association suggested yesterday that the United States could solve its critical problems in the Far East by negotiating an agreement with Russia pledging "maintenance of China's independence and the status quo in southeastern Asia."

A report of the private research organization contended that in view of European developments a new Japanese-American trade treaty "or even the gift of China, if it could be given, would not necessarily satisfy Japan." A commercial treaty between the United States and Japan was abrogated last year.

"Japanese aggression," the report continued, "tolerated by the western democracies in China, threatens now to spread into southeast Asia. If Japan strikes south, this move will doubtless be synchronized with the period of maximum German-Italian pressure in Europe."

Unless an agreement can be reached with Russia, the report said, "there is every indication that the Soviet Union, while continuing to aid China, will assume a noncommittal attitude toward a Japanese excursion into the South Seas."

Discussing how the United States could best protect its interests in the Far East, the study contended that "more extensive aid to China at this time, including additional financial support and even a minimum of military supplies, would place limitations on Japan's freedom of action."

"Recent history," the report concluded, "offers slight hope that efforts to conciliate Japan through concessions will prove a realistic and workable safeguard for American interests in the Pacific. It remains to be seen whether firm measures, applied at this late date, would restrain Japan, or on the contrary provoke it to retaliatory action . . . Effective American opposition to further Japanese aggression, unless close Soviet-American cooperation could be achieved, is probably limited to the period within which the fleet can be kept in the Pacific."

States Asked To Let Nation Handle Aliens

Their Registration Is a Federal Matter, Biddle Declares

Solicitor General Francis Biddle, Acting Attorney General, yesterday called upon the States to allow the prosecution of subversive elements and the registration of aliens to remain strictly in the province of the Federal Government.

Echoing a recent admonition by President Roosevelt, Biddle cautioned State governments not to undertake independent programs to cope with fifth columnists or to check on activities of aliens.

In an exchange of correspondence with Gov. Prentice Cooper of Tennessee, published by the Justice Department, Biddle said these pursuits were "incident to national, not State, sovereignty."

"It requires little imagination," he continued, "to anticipate that if Federal, State and local governments all enact statutes and ordinances requiring the registration of aliens and imposing other burdens upon them, not shared by citizens, these unfortunates will be subjected to constant harrassment."

The Solicitor General added that such harrassment "will store up within them understandable resentment tending to drive them further and further from embracing the principles for which this country has always stood."

Biddle affirmed that the Federal Government was "actively contending with those aliens who are not loyal and innocent, but who are bent upon harm to this Nation."

In a radio address from Philadelphia, he reiterated the Government's view that registration is required not only as a means of identification, but also as a protection of aliens' interests.

"Our registration will be their protection from persecution," Biddle said.

Hindsight and Foresight

By HOLGAR J. JOHNSON

President, Institute of Life Insurance

JUST a short time ago the Congress of the United States put the finishing touches on another 3 billion dollars' worth of national defense appropriations.

"Insurance against war," they called it. And it seems a small price to pay for peace and security. True, it is about four cents out of every dollar every one of us will earn this year, but if it will just give us the chance to go on being free, to go on seeking individual security and national happiness, we can well afford it.

It may interest you to know that 3 billion dollars is also just about the sum of the benefits which life insurance companies will pay out or credit this year to policyholders or their families.

These 3 billions of life insurance will mean food and shelter and comfort—peace—for about a million families. Some of the families are your neighbors or may even be your friends or relatives. In all, there are sixty-four million life insurance policyholders in America who, even as you and I, foresee the need of a personal or family "defense fund"—a protection against the dangers all men face.

And so, each of the sixty-four million of us "appropriates" a few cents out of every dollar he earns and puts it into life insurance.

AND I think the most comforting thought of all is that we can depend on our life insurance. Your life insurance company may seem far away from you, impersonal. But when loss or trouble comes, you'll find it right at your side, all prepared to give you the full reward of your foresight.

NOTE: In this regular Monday column, paid for at advertising rates, the Institute of Life Insurance has asked its president to discuss questions of interest to life insurance policyholders. Inquiries may be addressed to 60 East 42nd Street, New York City.

McCarran Urges Court Of Domestic Relations

Suggests Tribunal To Relieve Burden Of Juvenile Bench

This is the last of a series on the Juvenile Court of the District, outlining its methods, scope, and responsibilities following criticism of the tribunal at Senate hearings.

The District Juvenile Court was established by the Act of 1939 as a social service agency to deal broadly with the problems of child welfare and delinquency. The act gave the court jurisdiction, concurrent with the District Court, over adults in nonsupport and other cases affecting children.

This law was intended to modernize the Juvenile Court here, which had functioned since 1906 as merely a criminal court. However, the Congress failed to correct the medieval qualities of much of the remainder of the Washington social service system, with the result that a heavy burden was thrown upon the Juvenile Court.

Solution Suggested

Senator McCarran (Democrat) of Nevada urged a complete investigation of this condition, when the broad scope of the court's work was brought out in recent hearings on the appointment of Judge Fay L. Bentley to succeed herself on the Juvenile Court bench.

Senator McCarran suggested that the solution might be in the establishment of a Domestic Relations Court, such as has worked well in Detroit and other cities.

Such a tribunal was advocated last year by Attorney David L. Riordan, a student of the law of personal relations. Riordan's plan was studied by a committee of the District Bar Association and lately has been brought before McCarran and other members of Congress.

Riordan proposed that the Domestic Relations Court be a branch of the iDstrict Court, presided over by one justice of that court, who would serve for an entire year without other assignment.

To this branch of the court would be referred all cases of nonsupport, suit for maintenance, child custody, divorces, annulment and the like. The court would establish a separate docket, limited to these cases, with a view to handling them as rapidly as they were filed. Many divorce cases now are caught in the jam of other matters before the District Court and cannot be tried for months.

It was urged that the District Court would benefit by having its docket cleared of such cases and that the Juvenile Court would be relieved of its present burden of adult cases, thus being better enabled to perform its child welfare functions.

To assist the Domestic Relations justice, Riordan proposed that the justice be assigned a separate commissioner and such deputies as might be needed. These would have the duty of keeping track of alimony payments, making investigations and making recommendations to the justice.

Similar work is now undertaken by the social workers and probation officers of the Juvenile Court, in adult cases. It was suggested that it might be desirable that the commissioner and his deputies be trained social workers.

Capital Woman Plans Army Of a Million

Ladies Will Wear Green Uniforms, Learn How to Shoot

An army of 1,000,000 women patriots in snappy green uniforms is in the offing.

Strictly feminine uniforms, to be sure, but an army of women who can shoot a rifle, drive an ambulance, cook in a canteen or execute a neat squads right.

Such is the plan announced yesterday by Mrs. Virginia Nowell, of Washington, founder and moving spirit of the month-old Women's National Rifle and Preparedness Association.

More Than Marksmanship

It will mean extinction for her "powder puff brigade" of women "parashooters" as such, through metamorphosis of the association into "a nation of feminine Robin Hoods" with feathers in their green caps and a will to aid Uncle Sam if he needs them, she said.

But, she emphasized, the new organization will provide training for women in many more national defense activities than marksmanship.

The name: "The Green Guard Volunteer Women of America."

"The uniform," said Mrs. Nowell, "is durable, inexpensive, attractive, becoming to the short and fat as well as the tall and stately or in-betweens.

They'll Wear Jodhpurs

"It is smart, distinctive, practical and yet very definitely nonmasculine. It consists of jodhpurs, a short, smart, zippered-front coat and a perky little hat, all in matching green twill.

"Feathers, pins and insignias to be used in the hats will designate rank and identity of squads."

Mrs. Nowell's plan is to distribute the uniforms, at $9.50 apiece, among various women's organizations desiring to form 20-women squads of Green Guards and to promote formation of other squads among unorganized women throughout the Nation.

They'll Decide on Trailing

It will be left up to the individual organizations, she said, to decide what specific kind of training they shall undertake.

"In this way," she explained, "bridge club groups may organize—do squad drill and take up some agreeable vocation. Wigwagging or signal corps work might be acceptable. Or bicycle riding. A corps of women on bicycles may prove invaluable. Also gardening, knitting, lessons in canteen cookery, rifle shooting, driving ambulances—numerous things."

Independently organized squads likewise will decide for themselves what occupation to pursue, Mrs. Nowell said.

The national headquarters, located at present in Mrs. Nowell's dining room at 1747 Church street northwest, will keep a record of what the various units are doing and serve as purchasing agent for the uniforms.

House Organ Planned

Mrs. Nowell emphasized that profits from the sale of uniforms would be used solely for necessary administrative expenses such as clerical work, a house organ to be known as "The Woman Volunteer" and other miscellaneous necessities.

She said she and other officers were donating their services and the organization's books would be open at all times for inspection by any member.

At the same time, Mrs. Nowell announced the fee for joining her organization had been reduced from $12.50 to $5.50 for those who desired rifle training. If marksmanship is not desired, no fee is necessary.

On organization a month ago, she explained, she had expected instructors to charge for teaching ambulance driving, first aid, canteen cookery and the like. Now, she said, it has been found these services can be obtained free and the only money needed is $5.50 apiece for prospective markswomen, all of which will go to the National Rifle Association for amunition and use of the ranges and rifles.

Too Bad, Folks, but Capitol Must Get One Day's Rest

Police Officer an Expert 'No-Man' When It Comes to Barring Crowds Of Sunday Visitors to U. S. Headquarters

A policeman, stationed in front of the Capitol, yesterday estimated that he says "No" at least once a minute on Sunday duty.

He gives that invariable answer to the invariable question: "Is there any way we can see inside the Capitol today?"

Yesterday, the usual Sunday throng of visitors was largely unaware of the Sunday closing, until they started climbing the Capitol steps.

Mrs. J. B. Leigh and her daughters, Mary, 10, and Catherine, 9, left Elizabeth City, N. C., about 4:30 a. m. in order to stop off briefly here—with the Capitol as their principal sightseeing goal—on their way to their new home in Pittsburgh.

"Ever since Mary studied about Washington in her history class, she's been coaxing for a trip to see the Capitol," Mrs. Leigh said.

Nearby stood Mr. and Mrs. John Brown and their daughter, Catherine' all longtime residents of Philadelphia, who had come over on their first trip to Washington.

"We have just the one day here, and we had hoped to see inside the Capitol," the daughter said, scrutinizing the outside.

Just about that time, seven busloads of Detroit boys, 120 in all, sons of employes in the Chrysler automobile plant, disembarked, and the policeman readied his negative.

A man, who waters the Capitol lawns, walked past with one of the new green cards issued to employes of the building to permit them to enter after closing hours. Visitors' eyes followed him wistfully as he headed for the building.

Dr. Hagner Dies; Noted Surgeon, Professor

Genito-Urinary Expert Had Served on Faculty Of G. W. U. Since 1905

Dr. Francis Randall Hagner, 66, Washington's first genito-urinary surgeon and oldest member in point of service of the George Washington University School of Medicine faculty, died unexpectedly early yesterday at his home, 1824 Nineteenth street northwest.

Illness had confined him to his room for a week or 10 days, but he had improved lately and expected to return to his office tomorrow. Death came at 3:30 a. m., apparently from a heart attack.

Funeral services will be held at 4 p. m. tomorrow at St. John's Episcopal Church, Sixteenth and H streets northwest. The Rev. Dr. Oliver J. Hart, rector, will officiate, and burial will be in Oak Hill Cemetery.

Dr. Hagner's death, said Dr. Walter A. Bloedorn, dean of the George Washington University School of Medicine, "removes from our midst one of the most beloved physicians of our time."

"The medical profession," he said, "has lost one of its most distinguished members."

His death was described as "an irreparable loss" to the community as well as the medical profession by Dr. Daniel Borden, president of the Medical Society of the District of Columbia.

Was Son of Physician

Dr. Hagner was a native of Washington and son of a noted Washington physician, Dr. Charles E. Hagner, and Isabella Davis Hagner.

Educated at George Washington University, where he received his M. D. degree in 1894, Dr. Hagner interned at Johns Hopkins Hospital, Baltimore, serving as assistant resident in surgery from 1896.

Since then he had practiced in Washington, the first physician here to adopt genito-urinary surgery as a specialty.

He became professor of genito-urinary surgery at George Washington University School of Medicine in 1905 and served until 1939, when he was made professor emeritus.

Dr. Hagner had served as president of the American Urological Association, the Medical Society of the District of Columbia and the Clinical Society of Genito-Urinary Surgeons.

He was a fellow in the American College of Surgeons and a member of the American Medical Association, the American Urological Association, the Medical Society of Virginia and the Southern Surgical Association.

He was a charter member of Sigma Chi Fraternity and belonged also to the Aztec Society, Order of Indian Wars.

His clubs included the Metropolitan, Army and Navy, Chevy Chase and South River.

Dr. Hagner married Miss Elizabeth Allemong, of Charleston, W. Va., in 1899. She survives with one sister, Mrs. Norman James, of Baltimore.

Interior Department Gives Precedence to Defense Work

By Edward Ryan

Without reorganization, the entire Interior Department has geared its work to aid the defense program according to the first report of Secretary Ickes' defense resources committee.

Their report, a ten-page inventory compiled from the recommendations of bureau chiefs, said that throughout the department defense business was getting first attention, and pointed out additional natural resources ready to be used when needed.

Converting the department from normal business to National defense work, the report said, will require no reorganization, but only "an intensification of effort."

The study left open the question of the line to be drawn in the department between defense and other activities. The question has faced Government employes since the President said he wanted to save $250,000,000 in expenses of non-defense agencies during the 1941 fiscal year.

Budget Bureau officials, assigned to supervise the savings, said that defining the line between defense and nondefense agencies would come only with detailed studies of every Government operation.

The Interior Department's own study indicates that all its resources will be useful in the defense program. "In times of peace, as the custodian of America's basic resources, the department is responsible for their prudent use," the report said. "In times of emergency, it has the expert knowledg and the technical ability to enable the most effective use to be made of these resources for the defense of the Nation."

Several bureaus, it was pointed out, have already started aiding the National Defense Advisory Commission and other defense agencies.

The Bureau of Mines is furnishing data on mineral supplies, technical advice and producing Army and Navy supplies of helium

Other bureaus are helping plan ways to use strategic raw materials, petroleum resources, power, grazing lands and timber to aid defense.

Further use of natural resources, it was pointed out, might be had in ways like these:

The General Land Office is equipped to convert large areas for use as bombing ranges, training ranges, camps and maneuver areas.

The Bureau of Reclamation, operating Boulder and Grand Coulee dams and other large power developments, and the Bonneville Administration are planning ways to turn their power to defense use. Connecting Grand Coulee and Bonneville, the report said, will provide the largest power pool in the Nation.

The Office of Indian Affairs is equipped to help increase oil, mineral and power production on Indian lands. About 42,000 Indians are physically eligible for military training, it was pointed out, and the office can turn over Indian schools for vocational training, along with 4,500 hospital beds, supplies of physical equipment and its own staff of skilled workers for the defense program.

The Bureau of Fisheries can increase food production, furnish supplies of glycerine for munitions and give the Navy 20 ocean-going vessels.

The Bituminous Coal Division has ready the most extensive information on the coal industry, and through coal producers boards could furnish a mechanism for organization of the industry.

The Grazing Service, with supervision over 141,000,000 acres of public land, can supply bombing ranges and other defense practice areas, assign its field workers to guard roads and buildings, open roads to new mining areas.

Thirty-four recreational areas, with 25,000 acres, could be supplied by the Park Service for camps, training grounds, depot sites, or rest centers.

The committee in charge of mobilizing the department's defense aids, is headed by E. K. Burlew, First Assistant Secretary. Its members include chiefs of the major bureaus, and the committee's executive secretary is Walton Onslow.

Roy F. Hendrickson, personnel director for the Agriculture Department, has started a new publication to aid employes who lost one job to find another.

All employes with good records who are dropped from the department during general reductions can get a free "job wanted" notice in the bulletin.

The employe notices includes details of the employe's education, working experience and record in the department, and the bulletins are circulated both inside the department, among the bureau chiefs, and broadcast outside the agencies known to be hiring new workers.

First to benefit from the new employment service will be several hundred employes who have been doing land utilization work in the field, and others cut from the staff June 30. Among the employes, said Hendrickson, are several architects and others who might be used by defense agencies.

Week's Building Drops to $48,506 At Alexandria

Alexandria's record-breaking building boom slowed temporarily last week, when the total for new construction and alterations and repairs dropped to $48,506, the weekly report of Building Inspector A. R. Lash revealed. It was one of the lowest weekly totals reported this year.

Although the first six months of 1940 established an all-time record, the first week in July saw only five permits issued for new construction, at a cost of $46,800. Alterations, repairs and additions amounted to $1,706, with six permits having been issued.

The largest individual project was undertaken by Yates Gardens, Inc., which obtained a permit for constructing one group of four brick row houses at a cost of $22,400.

British Never Failed French, Says Officer

Made Only Fruitful Counterattack in Flanders, He Adds

By the Associated Press

London, July 7.—The British Expeditionary Force delivered the only successful counterattack of the Flanders campaign and "never once failed the French," a senior staff officer declared today.

The British withdrew from Generalissimo Maxine Weygand's scheme to slash across the German channel coast salient only when imminent collapse of the Belgian army endangered the British left flank, this informant asserted.

Answering a charge by French Foreign Minister Baudouin that the B. E. F. had done nothing to close the Artois gap in the campaign, he outlined the British part in the fighting, after eight German armored divisions and eight motorized infantry divisions swept from the Meuse River to the English Channel, separating the Belgian-British and the French first army of about nine divisions from the French army in the south.

British Counterattack

A series of sinister twists and unexpected disasters turned the Allied armies from a counterattack and a chance of victory, to roads leading only to death or to Dunkerque, the officer said.

Two divisions and mechanized cavalry units of the British army made the only counterattack in force in the 15 days between the first large German break-through on the Meuse River (May 12) and King Leopold's capitulation on May 27, he declared.

This attack was made at Arras on May 22 without French support, and like the Weygand plan, sought to bridge a 30-mile gap between the beleaguered Allies on the north and the French line on the Somme and Aisne rivers.

The British smashed their way south to Croisilles, but the next day had to be pulled out of its positions through a gap at Douai to save it from being entirely surrounded.

The officer related that a greater smash—an elaboration of the first—had been "mounted" and that plans for it were perfected as the weary British infantry drew off the night of May 22. Simultaneously, the French were to attack from the south.

The attack was to be delivered May 25 by five divisions. Two were to be British divisions, the fifth and fiftieth, which had counterattacked at Arras.

Viscount Gort, commander-in-chief of the British field forces, despite French protests, declared the divisions would not be "rested and ready" until May 26. Marshal Weygand gave in to the B. E. F.'s commander.

Three French divisions were drawn from the first French army defeated at Namur. Badly mauled, it had been reforming on the British right since May 19.

British Low on Bullets

On May 23 and 24 units of this army had made isolated local attacks southward toward Cambrai along the edges of the gap but with little success.

The B. E. F. had at this point, "about 160 rounds" of ammunition for each field gun and a scarcity of small arms bullets made the situation grave.

On May 25, the day before the attack, the situation was "gravely complicated" by the gradual disintegration of the Belgian army, guarding the left flank of the B. E. F. The Belgians were shoved, not backward to the expected line stretching northwest to the coast, but northeast onto the Dutch frontier. On May 25 Gort sent his only reserve—one brigade—to reinforce the Belgians. All nine British divisions were in line.

Gort Makes Decision

Gort, after a day in which he had to balance the giving up of the British part in the Weygand plan against a possible collapse of the Belgians and a subsequent German encirclement of his own force, made his decision.

Two divisions intended for use in Weygand's plan, he sent northward to bolster his own left wing, the officer continued, despite a conviction of the British staff that the French would not attack unless they had British support. It was dictated, he said, by the necessity of saving the B. E. F. from encirclement.

When Gort informed French Gen. Blanchard of his decision, Blanchard and his staff planned the withdrawal of the French army to the coast.

The officer said the French staff, like Gort, knew of the Belgian weakness and at 11 o'clock that night (May 26), as the generals contemplated the abandonment of the plan "that might have won us respite" a mud-spattered courier brought news that King Leopold intended to capitulate at midnight. That made the decision for them, and the retreat to Dunkerque began.

Ulster Premier Sees Churchill As British Talk of Eire Invasion

Lord Craigavon 'Wholly Satisfied' With English Attitude; Has Refused to Yield Northern Independence for Defense

Copyright by New York Times

London, July 7.—Lord Craigavon, premier of Ulster, hurried to London for an urgent defense conversation with Prime Minister Churchill today while the city hummed with rumors of an imminent invasion of Britain through the Irish "back door."

No details of the conversation were disclosed by official quarters, but when Lord Craigavon returned to Belfast this evening he said he was "wholly satisfied with the attitude of the British government."

Considerable pressure has been brought to bear on Lord Craigavon to cooperate with the Eire government in the defense of all Ireland even if he has to submit Ulster to union with Eire. But all indications at a late hour were that this pressure had failed.

Craigavon in the past has refused to cooperate with the Eire government on defense unless Prime Minister De Valera abandons Eire's neutrality, dismisses the Italian and German ministers from Dublin and promises not to raise the constitutional question of partition. It was pointed out to Lord Craigavon that this is no time to play politics, but this evidently did not change his views.

Calls Neutrality "Danger"

London, July 7 (AP).—Lord Craigavon said today that "Eire's neutrality constitutes a source of great danger not only to Eire (Ireland) herself, but to the United Kingdom."

"So long as Eire's neutrality is maintained," Lord Craigavon continued, "the British government is precluded from entering into any arrangement for the defense of Eire or for the combined defense of Eire and the United Kingdom."

With the threat of a German invasion of Ireland stirring the British press to urge plans for the united defense of Ireland, Lord Craigavon stressed the value of Ulster (northern Ireland) as an open door to Ireland for British troops in the event of an invasion.

Opposes De Valera

Lord Craigavon, the embodiment of uncompromising opposition of Ulster's ruling faction to the union long sought by Ireland, said an all-Ireland defense on De Valera's terms "would mean the neutrality of all Ireland, and, as a consequence, the withdrawal of British troops from northern Ireland. The forces remaining in Ireland would be hopelessly insufficient to deal with German invasion."

No military talks with Eire are possible while the country is "harboring Germans and Italians who are doing great damage," he added.

bat the repeated aerial attacks which have kept the fortress in a state of constant alarm.

[The British news agency, Reuters, meanwhile, quoted the French agency, Havas, as reporting the Petain government had warned that British ships or planes approaching within 20 miles of the French coast would be attacked.]

French Losses Put at 1,000

The French communique, published in Le Petit Dauphinois, said the French squadrons and Axis planes had bombed British warships in Gibraltar harbor, including some that attacked the French fleet at Mers el-Kebir July 3.

"At least one large British warship" was hit, it said.

The same newspaper published a dispatch declaring that French losses in the Mers el-Kebir action, taken by the British to prevent delivery of France's surrendered fleet to Germany and Italy, were believed to total 1,000 dead, missing and wounded.

There were only 200 survivors from the battleship Bretagne, and 200 were killed or missing and 150 were wounded aboard the battleships Dunkerque and Provence and the flotilla leader Mogador, the same dispatch said.

(The Bretagne was blown up and the Dunkerque, Provence and Mogador were set on fire in the British naval attack off Algeria.)

Corporative State Planned

Vice Premier Pierre Laval declared at Vichy today that the new constitution to be drafted for France will be permanent, and not designed merely to meet a temporary situation.

The French press described the projected new system as "corporative." (A similar term is applied by Fascists to the Italian government.)

Parliament was scheduled to meet here tomorrow to convoke the national assembly to authorize a new authoritarian constitution. The assembly will meet a day or two after the separate sessions of the Chamber of Deputies and Senate.

(A Reuters, (British news agency) dispatch received in London from Vichy said less than half of the French Parliament would attend the meeting.

Jean Prouvost, French information minister, in a declaration issued at Vichy in response to British Prime Minister Churchill on the naval action, which precipitated the final break between the former Allies, said:

"Within a few hours you have brought more sorrow to the sailors' families than ten months of naval battles have done.

"These sailors whom you have killed were the same who, a few weeks ago, saved four-fifths of the British army on the shore of Flanders, while only half the French forces succeeded in embarking."

"We have understood," Prouvost concluded, "it cost us too dear for us to have been soldiers of Britain yesterday for us to consent today to be sailors of the Union Jack."

A French war council in Toulouse, meanwhile, sentenced former Gen. Charles de Gaulle in absentia to four years in prison and fined him 100 francs for disobeying army orders and inciting soldiers' disobedience.

(Gen. De Gaulle, who refused to accept France's capitulation to Germany, has led continued resistance from London, where he has appealed by radio to French forces to continue the fight and, in violation of the Petain government's orders, has organized French remnants in Britain to join British land and sea forces.)

1,600 Sail on Washington

Galway, Ireland, July 7 (AP).—Approximately 1,600 Americans fleeing the possibility of German invasion of the British Isles sailed for home today aboard the United States liner Washington.

The liner weighed anchor at 6:45 a. m. (12:45 a. m., E. S. T.) but was delayed by fog in making her way down Galway Bay and did not leave Irish waters until 3 p. m.

Much confusion marked the sailing. A number of trunks were lost. Many passengers were without a change of apparel. Most of the lost luggage was believed mislaid in Euston Station in London.

There was much grumbling among passengers, especially about the lack of facilities in Galway after they were rushed there, far ahead of schedule, because of reports that the Washington would sail Friday night. Many found no housing accommodations and no chance of boarding the liner because of tidal conditions. The passengers were transported to the ship in tenders.

lands were also subected to heavy bombardment.

The British acknowledged loss of five planes in the widespread operations.

The Admiralty claimed for British submarines, also, effective operations against Germany's sea lane communications with Norway.

5 Nazi Ships Torpedoed

A communique said the submarine Snapper scattered a large German convoy after hitting two supply ships with torpedoes, then torpedoed three ships in another convoy.

The British said the German raiders have had a threefold objective: to attempt to blockade Britain from the air in the absence of enough naval strength to attempt a sea blockade; to soften up defense systems in anticipation of invasion of England, and to damage factories to keep down British warplane production.

Plane Output Doubled

In this connection, Lord Beaverbrook, minister for aircraft production, announced today that output in June more than doubled the total in the same month last year.

His statement said increased quantities of aircraft and engines were purchased in the United States in recent weeks. The total value of aircraft orders amounts to more than $1,000,000,000, he said.

Beaverbrook said "if the seas remain as free to us as they are today, shipments of aircraft reaching up from America will soon give us an additional output in every month of real value to us." He added that $50,000,000 of aircraft and parts had been bought in Canada.

Best Man Helps Couple Celebrate 50th Anniversary

W. O. Moubry, 69, best man at the wedding of Mr. and Mrs. S. P. Beery, in 1890 yesterday joined in celebrating the couple's golden wedding anniversary. It fell on Saturday.

Resident of Singers' Glen, Va., where Mr. Beery taught school years ago, Moubry visited Emory Methodist Church where the couple were honored at Sunday school and worship services. He presented the school's floral tokens to Mr. and Mrs. Beery, and I. G. Beckwith sang "The Holy City."

Led by John Gardner, president, members of the Box Bible Class, of which Beery is one of the teachers, and the Mabel Gatley Class, which Mrs. Beery attends, brought felicitations.

Dr. Horace E. Cromer conducting the church services later in the morning, complimented the couple, and Wilfred Smith, choir director, rendered "Those Golden Bells."

French Fleet Demobilized, British Claim

Raiders Pound Italian Land, Sea, Air Bases Near Mediterranean

By the Associated Press

Cairo, Egypt, July 7.—Successful demobilization of the French east Mediterranean fleet and unceasing aerial pounding of Italian land, sea and air bases in the Mediterranean and North Africa were reported today by the British.

The operations over the week-end were aimed at the goal Prime Minister Churchill set up for the royal navy and air force when he promised Commons: "We shall take the necessary steps to maintain command of the Mediterranean."

Since last Friday, the British report, the Royal Air Force has engaged in these activities:

Over land—Scored direct bomb hits on two hangars and other buildings at Catania, Sicily; smashed two grounded planes and ignited two oil tanks at Zula, on the Red Sea coast of Eritrea; bombed and machine-gunned troops at Bardia, Italian East Africa.

Malta Raided Again

Over sea—Forced two large transports aground, seriously damaged another; damaged and probably sank either a destroyer or a submarine, and left two smaller ships "in difficulty" off Tobruk, Libya; sank two supply ships off Bardia, possibly damaging others.

In the air—Damaged a bomber and fighter plane at Bardia; shot down three raiding Italian planes over the British naval base on the island of Malta.

In Saturday's raid two planes of a total of four were sent into the sea after bombs were dropped and machine-gun fire split the air with little effect. Four civilians were injured.

On Sunday two formations of five enemy aircraft each dropped several bombs. There was no damage to military objectives, but some civilians were killed and wounded and several houses were destroyed. One enemy plane was shot down by British fighters.

Claim 3 British Planes Downed

[The Italians reported the raid on Malta, from which all Italian planes returned, was part of widespread attacks on British positions and said bombs started fires in the Malta Arsenal zone.

[The Italian account of the British attack at Tobruk said Italian planes and antiaircraft fire brought down three British aircraft. Two unloaded merchant ships in the harbor were reported hit by bombs.

[In British North and East Africa the Italian high command claimed:

[Italian planes bombed fuel supplies and hangars and wrecked six British planes on airports in British North Africa, mostly in Egypt.

Claim All Planes Return

[Eight British planes were hit and hangars were damaged at airports in southeastern Egypt, near Italian Eritrea.

[Damage to military objectives the Italians described as light, in the British raid on Bardia.]

The British claimed all their raiding planes returned safely from Sicily and made no mention of losses in other attacks.

British naval and air force communiques said the low-flying attacks on the Tobruk Harbor were "successful," although the raiding planes had to drive through a storm of antiaircraft fire.

Successful demobilization of French fleet units with the British at Alexandria was credited by Col. Salisbury Jones to a "bond of friendship between the British and French crews." He said the operation was accomplished without difficulty and in a spirit of complete understanding.

The demobilization followed lengthy conferences Saturday between French and British naval officers.

It was understood the British agreed that French sailors who wished to fight no more would be allowed to return to France. Those who are willing to continue the fight alongside the British are to be given "fullest facilities," including British naval pay. The British also are to pay for all operations of their ships.

A communique told of new penetration of Italian colonial frontiers by British desert patrols which cut water pipelines between Bardia and Capuzzo, in Libya.

The British said Italian casualties in attacks July 4 on Kassala amounted to 300 men, two planes, two antiaircraft guns and eight light tanks.

(The Italian high command reported today its border troops strengthened their positions in the Kassala section into which they pushed from Eritrea.)

Gandhi and Party Renew Demands For Independence

Delhi, India, July 7 (AP).—Mohandas K. Gandhi and members of the Congress (Nationalist Party) Working Committee passed a resolution today reiterating a demand for complete independence for India, with immediate formation of a popular government.

The meeting today was held to consider proposals made to Gandhi by the English viceroy June 30. Terms of these proposals were undisclosed.

'Fifth Column' Beat France, Experts Claim

Americans Tell How Nazis Pushed 'Assault From Within'

By the Associated Press

Bilbao, Spain, July 7.—Military experts here say that one of the greatest single factors in the defeat of France was a Nazi "fifth column" attack more efficient than ever seen in any previous war.

This "assault from within" was described as developed along three major lines:

Guiding German bombers to their objectives.

Keeping the German high comman informed by small, isolated wireless transmitters.

Harassing French morale and organization.

Two Americans who have just arrived in Bilbao said they saw flares shoot up during the German aerial bombardments of Le Havre and Bordeaux, outlining areas to be raided within those French ports.

The Americans, who had entree to various French official circles, said an important French official was executed the day after the bombardment of Bordeaux.

Get Advance Information

As an example of the contacts maintained with the German command by a little band of operators with wireless transmitters, the Americans repeated a story told by French soldiers on their return from the northern battlefields.

According to this story, loudspeakers in the German lines announced the names and numbers of French regiments which were coming up as reserves three days before the French soldiers at the front knew the facts themselves.

The French were reported to have seized 20 radio transmitters later in raids.

One of the most effective tricks devised by the fifth columnists was sprung when the Germans began driving swiftly southward into France. Nazi agents, posing as French officials, would telephone the mayors of communities in areas not immediately endangered, warn them the Germans were approaching and order immediate evacuation.

Armored Cars Abandoned

That was responsible in at least one case, the Americans said, for abandonment of a factory with more than 100 fully-completed fast armored cars several days before the Germans arrived.

The worried French government, American experts said, contributed to the growing confusion and the reduction of efficiency by ordering that all official orders must be double-checked.

France was a ripe field for recruiting fifth columnists because large numbers of foreigners had been admitted in the last 20 years, the Americans said, but some of the most efficient work was done by individuals in the upper political brackets, who were blackmailed into cooperating.

To the operatives placed in France before the war, they said, Germany sent reinforcement by ingenious methods. The greatest influx, it was said, came disguised as Belgian refugees when the French opened their frontiers to the thousands fleeing before the German invasion of the low countries.

The French themselves acknowledged there was no way to prevent the entry of enemy agents in this manner without holding up the entire stream of refugees.

Kitten Lost in Ventilator Shaft After Eight-Story Fall

Members of the Fire Rescue Squad, police, and the building janitor worked nearly an hour yesterday in futile efforts to locate a kitten which plunged down an eight-story ventilator shaft at 900 Nineteenth street northwest.

Owner of the pet, Miss Grace D. Beaton, 25, of 705 Eighteenth street northwest, who was visiting a friend at the Nineteenth street address, was on the roof when the kitten somehow fell through the ventilator opening which connects with the building's kitchens.

Rescue Squad members visited various kitchens along the route of the shaft but were unable to hear any "meows" that would have furnished clues as to where the kitten might have lodged in the 14-inch tube.

Finally, rescuers were forced to give up, much to the dismay of the pet's owner, when it was deduced that the only way left to retrieve the kitten would have been to tear down the shaft.

Swedish-Nazi Pact Called Peace Move

Premier Hansson Defends Obeisance To Reich Demands

By Otto D. Tolischus

Copyright by New York Times

Stockholm, July 7.—In a speech at Ludvika, Premier Per Albin Hansson today defended the Swedish government's compliance with German demands for the transit of German war materials and soldiers through Sweden, and reaffirmed that the government's "foremost task is still to keep Sweden out of war and to safeguard her freedom and independence."

The speech was delivered to meet press criticism and to allay growing public disquiet over the future consequences of the government's action based on fear that Germany having obtained one concession may soon demand more.

[Hansson declared "fundamental changes" in Europe since the start of war have made necessary a trade and exchange system between Sweden and Germany and German-held Norway and Denmark.

[Negotiations expected to bring "provisional agreement" for such a system already are under way at Stockholm, the Associated Press said.]

"Neutrality and national emergency defense," he said, "are our instruments in our efforts to save our country from war. The efficiency of our guard must be kept up as well as the spirit, national vitality, and determination which inspired our people with the power to face all difficulties. Perceivable tendencies to despair of developments, or of events which obscure the forces attempting to exploit them, must be suppressed. Our lives, our freedom, will always remain dependent upon our will and power."

Regarding the Government's compliance with specific German transit demands which now find their explanation in British mining and submarine action in "German seas," Hansson explained:

"During the war in Norway we declined requests of deliveries or transits of arms and ammunitions to either belligerent. The situation is different now. Hostilities between Germany and Norway have ceased. But the European situation at large also has undergone a fundamental change. It is impossible to overlook the fact that seven countries of Europe are occupied (by Germany) and France has accepted an armistice."

3 Die in Chicago Fire

Axis, Russian Press Attacks Alarm Turks

Criticism Is Seen As Heralding Drive On Dardanelles

By the Associated Press

Istanbul, Turkey, July 7.—German, Russian and Italian press and radio attacks on Turkey caused grave concern today in Turkish government circles, where the criticism was viewed as a possible build-up for a move by Russia toward the Dardanelles.

Many diplomats express belief that Russian demands for concessions in the straits might come to a head this week.

The criticism of Turkey came from commentators who said there was evidence that Turkey plotted with the Allies for air attacks on Caucasus oil fields in Russia. The government flatly denied any part in such a plot and insisted that Turkey, throughout its alliance with Britain and France, maintained a friendly policy toward Russia.

Intensive military preparations were continued with additional manpower called to the colors. Some foreign military observers estimated that the new call raised the number under arms to 800,000.

Work is being rushed harvesting Turkey's exceptionally large wheat crop. Its exact size has not been disclosed on the grounds that this is military information.

Persons arriving in Turkey from Syria told of fears there that British military forces might occupy the French-mandated territory. Many French officers were said to have left Syria and joined British forces in Palestine.

Russians Add Troops

Bucharest, July 7—(Passed by Censor)—(AP).—Russia poured additional armed divisions into Rumania's lost northern territories tonight to strengthen motorized troops which completed the occupation of Bessarabia and northern Bucovina July 3.

Officially it was declared that "all is quiet" along the border, with Rumanian troops not involved in any incidents in the past few days.

Nation-wide Rumanian precautions continued, however, against a new emergency.

It was indicated that the government of the new Premier Ion Gigurtu planned to proceed cautiously in fulfilling its announced extremist measures which might provoke internal disorder and injure Rumania's productivity for Germany in this crucial war year.

Axis Assures Bulgaria

Sofia, July 7 (AP).—Government sources said today Bulgaria has been assured by Germany and Italy that her territorial claims upon Rumania will be satisfied in a general, peaceful settlement—or earlier if changes can be made without upsetting Balkan peace.

The official Bulgarian news agency declared definitely that such assurances have come from Rome and Berlin.

tonight as saying plans for an offensive against England were discussed today by Adolf Hitler and Count Ciano.

The Rome correspondent for the newspaper Basler Nachrichten was quoted as saying Irland would be the first objective in any attack on the British Isles.

Other matters reported discussed by the representatives of the Axis alliance dealt with "common regulation of future continental relations and policies."

U. S. Considered

Berlin, July 7 (U.P.).—The fact that Count Ciano's Berlin visit is being broken so soon by a tour of the Western Front battlefields indicates that no important division of opinion developed at today's conference.

Southeastern Europe no doubt occupied a good portion of the conference because of the incursion of Russia into Rumania and the importance of keeping the Axis flank protected while the war is pushed against Britain. In addition to the Russian problem, there are the territorial claims of Hungary and Bulgaira against Rumania and Italy's vital economic interest in the Balkans to be considered.

Relations with the United States probably were discussed because of their important bearing on the war as a whole, heightened by Washington's recent reaffirmation of the Monroe Doctrine and warnings to Germany against interference in the Western Hemisphere.

Plans for "New Europe"

Rome, July 7 (AP)—Italy looked to today's Berlin conference of Adolf Hitler and Count Ciano as a fresh sign of "closest cooperation" of the Axis partners.

In a telephone message from Berlin, the diplomatic correspondent of Stefani, official Italian news agency, reported tonight:

"High representatives of the two Axis powers have reached complete agreement" regarding continuation and development of the war and in relation to construction of a "new Europe."

The authoritative Fascist editor, Virginio Gayda, commenting on the visit, said:

"No indiscretion today may be made regarding the new Italian-German meeting in Berlin. Europe may only know that it has substantial reasons. It will mean, as preceding meetings have meant, a new stretch on the combative, constructive road of new associated nations and their great chiefs.

"The war is not finished. Great Britain remains in the struggle with her uselessly menacing rumors and her imperial resources. She feels, however, by now the overpowering forces of the two great Axis powers.

100 Slain in Mexican Election Battles

were voting for Gen. Almazan.

In efforts to prevent Almazan being "counted out," many of his supporters organized their own voting places across the street from the official government polls.

Vast crowds, boldly wearing the green Almazan ribbons, milled in front of the voting booths.

They appeared to include all sorts of persons—laborers, peasants and businessmen.

Truckloads of soldiers, with machine guns and rifles ready, patrolled the streets constantly.

Army cavalry and policemen on motorcycles, on horseback and afoot were everywhere but failed to prevent frequent clashes.

At one point a score of policemen were battling a crowd of supporters of Avila Camacho, though he is the government's candidate.

Fleeing Gunmen Killed

The Avila Camacho crowd had fired on a group of voters in front of an Almazan booth. Police on roofs and in the street were busily firing at the Camachistas, who took refuge in an untenanted apartment house. The police closed in and killed three gunmen fleeing across the roofs.

In Mexico City police, mounted and afoot, fought with a great throng on Pase de la Reforma, one of the capital's most beautiful boulevards, at a point almost in front of the foreign office.

The police swung clubs freely and drove the crowd back with their horses, firing over the heads of the demonstrators, who angrily shouted, "Viva Almazan!"

PRM, the administration political party of President Lazaro Cardenas, which is backing Gen. Avila Camacho, announced over the radio that "Avila Camacho has triumphed throughout the country."

The broadcast was interrupted, however, as the announcer yelled into the microphone:

"Almazanistas are attacking our station here on the Avenida Cinco de Mayo (in the downtown business district) because of our announcements."

Gen. Almazan issued copies of various announcements which he said had been prepared yesterday and were being read today over the radio, claiming victory for Avila Camacho.

Scores of polling places in the Federal District were raided by roving bands, shooting from busses and automobiles.

Some polling places were burned.

Witnesses said that adherents of both Avila Camacho and Almazan participated in the raids.

Charge "Gangster Methods"

From throughout Mexico there came reports of seizure of polling places before they opened, of a lack of ballots and of refusal to permit known followers of Almazan to vote.

The Almazan party charged that the administration-controlled police and labor unions were using "gangster methods" to intimidate voters.

Numerous reports, however, told of leaders on both sides seizing and wrecking polling places. There were frequent thefts of ballot boxes by armed bands and in one district a polling place was burned. It was said the place was set afire when Cacachistas refused to admit Almazanistas.

President Lazaro Cardenas, who is barred by the constitution from succeeding himself, ordered one of the polling places opened after it had been locked for three hours. Immediately after his departure an automobile of gunmen appeared and opened fire, routing the voters and stealing the ballot box.

Under the Mexican electoral system the first citizens to arrive organize the poll management board. Consequently numerous fights were reported during the night as groups sought control of various polls.

The two leading candidates, Gen. Camacho and Gen. Almazan, were cheered by throngs gathered at polling places near their residences when they voted. Camacho said he voted for Gen. Rafael Sanchez Tapia, a close friend of his army days.

N. Y. Power Lines Guarded After New Bomb Threat

New York, July 7 (AP).—Special details of police today were assigned to guard all electric power stations and gas storage tanks of the Consolidated-Edison Co. following new bomb threats.

The order came after an automobile service station manager reported he received two mysterious phone calls last night warning him two gas tanks on West End avenue were to be blown up.

Meanwhile police continued their search for clews to the Fourth of July bombing at the World's Fair that killed two detectives. A German subject, arrested in the investigation of the blast, was held in the extraordinarily high bail of $10,000.

Washington Grows

If you eat and sleep here, this is where you live, 1940 census-takers told Washingtonians. When the roll was called, 663,153 answered. The figure is 36.3 per cent more than that for 1930, when the District's population was listed as 486,869. If the residents of Alexandria and other nearby centers are added, the total is 962,743, a gain of 43.5 per cent for the metropolitan area.

By this spectacular leap Washington has become at least the Nation's twelfth city, passing Buffalo and Milwaukee. Unless San Francisco—as yet unreported—shows a substantial increase over its 1930 population of 634,394, the Capital will attain eleventh place.

For better or for worse, the gain was accomplished while four of the largest cities registered a decrease. Philadelphia declined from 1,950,961 to 1,935,086; Newark from 442,337 to 428,236; St. Louis from 821,960 to 813,748, and Pittsburgh from 669,817 to 665,384.

Perhaps the upward move in Washington could best be explained by the analogy that bees go where the honey is. Doubtless the New Deal is responsible for a large portion of the influx. As for the decline in populations elsewhere, aside from a suspected general trend away from large cities perhaps Pittsburgh and St. Louis proved too smoky for their less-hardened inhabitants; perhaps people just don't like Newark's proximity to Jersey City; perhaps the marked relapse in brotherly love has affected Philadelphia. In any event those cities are less crowded than they were in 1930.

The survey would not be complete without some notice that our neighbor Baltimore has 854,144 persons compared to 804,874 in 1930. If this circumstance needs any explaining, the reason may be found in the fact that Baltimoreans are home-loving bodies who stay and increase, and that a number of visitors arrived, liked what they saw and forgot to leave.

British Trade Losses

The march of conquest in Europe has been so swift that little thought has been given by Americans to the trade problems confronting Great Britain in a Nazi-dominated Europe. In fact, we have not yet had time to gauge our own trade losses, or to consider the complications that may arise in the near future as a result of the developing situation.

A good idea of the extent of the adjustment Great Britain is called upon to make is provided by an examination of what has been happening to that country's steel import requirements and to her coal exports.

In its issue of June 15, the London Economist pointed out that in the best pre-war year, 1937, Britain imported more than 6,000,000 tons of iron ore, a large proportion of which came from the Scandinavian countries. The loss of this ore, states the Economist, "would become more serious if shipments from Algeria and Tunis were also interrupted." Since those lines were written the spread of the war has produced the feared interference, leaving the British only the hope that the deficit might be made good by imports of American steel.

Coal, one of Great Britain's most important exports, affords another illuminating illustration of the disrupting effect of Germany's conquests. By the middle of June the German military occupation had deprived Great Britain of markets which usually take from one-third to one-half all her cargo coal exports. The closing of the Italian, Baltic and North Sea markets was estimated by the Economist to have affected about 55 per cent of the exports of a peace year. However, increased coal exports to France made necessary by the German invasion of her northern coal mining areas had more than compensated for the loss of regular markets. But with France now out of the market, the outlook is grim, although for the time being Britain's domestic war-time requirements will help take up the slack.

Steel and coal provide only two typical instances of the extensive economic dislocations resulting from a severance of British trading ties with the Continent. But they help suggest the revolutionary transformation of the British industrial structure which would be made necessary were the British Isles to be permanently cut off from continental markets.

Hesitant Capital

So far the market for new issues has shown no signs of responding to the stimulus of a defense program which is expected to cost the Government about $14,000,000,000. Indeed the Commercial and Financial Chronicle reports that the amount of all corporate issues disposed of in June, either publicly or privately, totaled only $111,600,000—the smallest since last September. Moreover, most of the issues represented refunding operations, with only $9,300,000 obtained for new capital purposes.

Of course the situation in Europe helps to account for this very poor showing. But in view of the active state of domestic business and the certainty of large outlays for many types of war equipment, the chronic dormancy of the capital market presents a very insistent challenge to the Administration.

The industries that must be relied upon to produce the goods required for the rearmament program will be compelled to expand their productive capacity to meet demands. For instance, it is estimated that an expansion of 400 per cent in the present rate of aircraft production will be necessary in order to attain the desired output of 50,000 airplanes per year.

Either the Government must provide the funds needed for expansion purposes, or new capital must be obtained through the banks (for short time purposes) and through flotation of new issues. It is highly desirable that this necessary financing should be done by putting private funds to work. Resources for the purpose are superabundant. What has been conspicuously lacking is the incentive to invest.

The stimulating effect of defense spending will not of itself provide the necessary inducement to private capital to finance an expansion program. American industry has been reluctant to increase its producing capacity even in face of tempting orders from the nations at war. It will be only slightly less reluctant to risk large capital outlays when orders are placed by our own Government, unless assured of reasonable profits and adequate protection against loss. So far that assurance is lacking.

Congress has put through legislation strictly limiting profits on contracts for ships and airplanes. But it has failed to provide against possible offsetting losses. Furthermore, industry is worried about the tax outlook. More generous provision for depreciation of plants constructed to supply armament needs is necessary to attract private capital into the field. There must also be assurance that new and oppressive forms of excess profits taxation are not contemplated.

To sum up: If private investors are to finance the required expansion of our industrial plant to meet defense needs, the Government must make it worth their while to do so.

Nobody wants to see any profiteering as a result of the present emergency. But it is merely stating an obvious fact to say that nobody can expect wholehearted cooperation from industry and private investors in financing the defense program if the Government follows policies that cut profits without making adequate allowance for the risk of loss.

The Busy R. A. F.

Some time ago Lord Beaverbrook, to whom Premier Churchill has entrusted the all-important task of speeding up Britain's airplane production, announced that, despite the losses suffered by the Royal Air Force in the fighting in Flanders and France, Great Britain now has more planes on hand than at any time since the war began.

How much truth there is to this claim, since echoed by other British leaders, and how much of it was propaganda to reassure and hearten the beleaguered population of the kingdom, there is no way of knowing. In any event, Great Britain still appears to be far from that parity in the air with Germany which she has been striving to achieve. But that, however, has not kept the R. A. F. from again and again taking the offensive against both Germany and Italy.

During the past week-end, for instance, the R. A. F. carried out raids on a dozen different enemy points in Europe and Africa. Important centers in the Ruhr and the Rhineland were again bombed and these attacks, American observers report, have not been without their effect. In addition to taking a considerable toll of lives and destroying property they have proved upsetting to the nerves of the industrial population of western Germany.

Raids were also carried out against German concentrations at Bergen, Norway, and against Italian bases at Catania, Sicily, Tobruk, El Gubbi and Bardia, Libya, and Lugh Ferrandi in Italian East Africa. At Oran, British planes completed the job of crippling the French battleship Dunkerque. In the meantime, the R. A. F. was engaged in defensive actions at Alexandria, Malta, Gibraltar and, of course, in the home sector, where German raids have become a daily affair.

Britain's numerical inferiority in the air vis-a-vis Germany and Italy is a handicap difficult to overcome, with all of Europe in the Nazi grip and American production still limited. In the meantime the exploits of the R. A. F. must, undoubtedly be adding to the self-confidence of the British people at a moment when, with the British isles in a state of virtual siege, they face an extremely difficult situation.

The Truth Revealed

Since the German army overran the Netherlands two months ago, no news of importance regarding conditions in that country has reached the outside world.

German propaganda agencies have, however, tried to create the impression that the people of the Netherlands were settling down to a peaceful, contented existence under benevolent Nazi rule.

But now, at last, the veil of silence has been lifted, and it reveals discord, not harmony, obtaining between the Dutch people and the representatives of the Third Reich. The German military commander accuses the Netherlands army and the civilian population of disloyalty to the occupying regime. He charges that British bombing attacks have been aided by information obtained from inside sources. He also rebukes the people for failure to understand that German measures give "safety and peace" to their country.

In short, the official communique of the irate Gen. Christiansen, head of the occupying force, is a complete give away, utterly destroying the pretty fiction that the Dutch are reconciled to their lot. It is also calculated to sweep away any lingering illusion that the military occupation means peace and release for a subject nation. Gen. Christiansen warns that acts of violence against members of the German army may be punished with death. Furthermore, Netherlands soldiers who fail to salute when they pass a German soldier will lose their freedom as released prisoners of war.

"Whoever—soldier or citizen—injures the prestige of German army authorities or symbols will be punished and acts of violence against members of the German army may be punished by death." This sweeping pronouncement certainly will not be misunderstood. It notifies the people of the Netherlands that safety and peace are to be enjoyed only by those who faithfully conform to the rules of conduct laid down for their guidance by their conquerors.

On Mopping Up

The art of the mop and broom has been elevated to academic status with the inauguration at Columbia University of a course in the techniques of "janitorism." Over 100 students at that institution are now being taught "the correct and improper methods of sweeping stairs" and "the theory and practice of window washing."

Humbler and odder trades than that of the dustpan have, at various times, won professional recognition. Large import houses employ crockery testers, whose job is the enviable one of breaking dishes—with impunity. Practically every government maintains a corps of tea and coffee tasters. The United States carries at least seven on its pay roll.

In Wales, until the middle of the nineteenth century, there flourished a guild of "Sin-eaters." At funerals a quantity of bread, cheese and beer was placed on the bosom of the deceased. The Sin-eater would then swallow the food and drink, thus assuming all of the dead person's responsibilities and misdeeds.

In New York, in the 1840's, a man by the name of George Leese earned a respectable living as a professional vampire. He charged so much a head for sucking the blood from wounds of pugilists at the conclusion of bouts fought in dives along the East River waterfronts.

Here are other employments or courses in instruction that attained the rank of professionalism: flea training, mourning for the departed, fashioning clothes for insects, lie testing, diaper changing, flagpole sitting, garbage scavenging, joke-smithing. And there is on record the case of a graduate student at one of our universities whose doctoral dissertation was on four ways of washing dishes. A companion piece might well be a volume based on the studies of Columbia's new group of scholars on four ways of wielding a broom, special recognition to be given to the one who can do so without stirring up the dust.

Rock Of Ages

From the Montgomery Advertiser.

In his delightful "Life on the Mississippi," Mark Twain wrote knowingly of Southern journalism. At one point, he said: "The trouble with the Southern reporter is—Women. They unsettle him; they throw him off his balance. He is plain, and sensible, and satisfactory, until woman heaves in sight. Then he goes all to pieces; his mind totters, becomes flowery and idiotic."

Now Mark Twain was one of the best reporters these United States have produced. But why should he place the mistake of mankind solely on the head of the reporter, who, after all, is little different from the butcher, the baker or the candlestick maker?

Against Willkie

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I attended a night session of the Philadelphia convention by radio with the greatest of ease. When Wendell Willkie had received 105 votes, I snapped off the current and lay down for a nap. When I awoke it was 12 o'clock and Willkie was romping down the homestretch to victory. "Pennsylvania casts 72 votes for Willkie." That congregation was vigorous and vociferous. They seemed to give no sign that they had endured for eight long years the hardships of a Democratic rule. That congregation was having a high old time.

I was lucky enough next day to tune in again just as Willkie began his speech of congratulations. In that speech I heard one word which spells defeat for Wendell Willkie: "I call you to a crusade." I at once took down my volume of Harold Lamb's "The Crusades" and read again about the Third Crusade of which Richard the Lion Heart was one of the great leaders.

Here is what Lamb says about Richard the Lion Heart: "Richard was a glorious fighter and the whole Third Crusade became a setting for his inimitable personal valor. But he could not conduct a campaign and this is what he tried to do. The result was quarreling—men and time wasted in the wrong places, delay, uncertainty and finally retreat when victory was at last possible. Richard played the knight-errant to his heart's content and lost the cause for which he fought. He never saw the Holy City and wound up in a German prison."

As I see it, Mr. Editor, the destiny of the American republics for a hundred years depends on the election next November. I hope that I am right in predicting that Wendell the Crusader, like Richard the Lion Heart, will never see the "Holy City."

GEORGE HENRY RAY.
Amherst, Va., July 1.

Tank Training

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Germany reportedly spent a year or more with great profit in training her officers in tank strategy by the maneuvering of large numbers of dummy tanks before she possessed quantities of the real article.

Why should not our Army immediately start the practical instruction of its higher command and other officers by selecting a suitable terrain and maneuvering over it many thousands of radio-equipped automobiles for the same reason, namely, that the hardest part of an organization to develop and to train is the top? Can we afford to wait until we have a supply of modern tanks before we start the practical training of men in handling thousands of tanks over a wide area, including the serious problems of strategy, coordination with aircraft, infantry and artillery, and the matters of fuel supply, maintenance, etc.? Admittedly automobiles cannot traverse certain ground easy for caterpillar treads, but the provision during the present summer of a suitable area, where certain larger problems can be studied immediately should be no harder for us than it was for the Germans some years back, and just as necessary.

Having witnessed the disastrous failure of a daylight and unscreened tank attack late in the last war because of an error in judgment of the commanding officer, I feel that insufficient attention is being given to field practice under conditions approximating actual warfare for the men at the top, and to finding by such means the most capable commanders. AUSTIN Y. HOY.
Fairfield, Conn., June 25.

We All Give Compulsory Service

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It seems that much has been lacking in the education of the people of this democracy if there is any resentment when compulsory service and training are so much as suggested as part of the demands of the Government in the present emergency.

Training of some sort is absolutly necessary for every individual. It may be self-discipline or the discipline of teachers, or of life itself, but training is essential to well-being and well-doing. Naturally, parasites resent anything which disturbs their easy way of living. But a government, association, family or person cannot long sustain "dead wood," which is a handicap, and not only does not contribute to its healthy growth, but saps its vitality.

Our Government is now carrying the burden of an unhealthy growth—our national debt. A debt which has been piled up by the people through their politicians, by their compulsory demands upon the United States Treasury. Whether they were wise or not, they have compelled us all to carry that burden.

There are so many compulsory demands by the Government that it is illuminating to hear the objections to compulsory service. We are compelled to obey laws, to pay taxes and custom duties and to go to school. Taxpayers are compelled to support the aged, the indigent, the unemployed, the criminals (in prisons) and to support schools, libraries, art galleries, poorhouses, hospitals, police service, Army and Navy and the administration of government. The taxpayers must also subsidize the merchant marine, farmers and, indirectly, labor and the railroads. All of this is given to the people at the compelling demands of the people who benefit directly.

But that is quite a list of compulsory maintenance of our Government, all of which requires training, self-sacrifice and industry on the part of the taxpayers to enable them to deliver the sustaining funds.

Why should the youth of the country object to giving one or even two years of service in return for that which they receive so abundantly? Especially as they will receive far more than they give even though in the much-defamed military service.

At present, when democracy and the freedom of our daily lives are in imminent danger of destruction (or it may be of disintegration) cooperation and service must be the watchword of every citizen. The term "compulsory service" is but an indication that there are far too many who have received so much they do not appreciate what they have and what they are getting and are unwilling to contribute their part in service to their country. But if they wake up to these facts and their responsibility, they will not voluntarily be parasites on our political body.

We must not let them be "dead wood."

LOUISE R. WILLIAMS.
Washington, July 4.

Have We A "Plight?"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In view of the history of our country I find it hard to understand the panicky state of mind of Mr. Henry Stimson when he speaks of our desperate plight should Britain's navy be destroyed, refers to the continent of North America as "having its back to the wall" and asserts that we cannot maintain our own free institutions "with Europe enslaved," etc., etc.

According to the textbooks in use when I went to school, about three or four million inhabitants of the new Western World, in 1776 and again in 1812, managed to maintain their free institutions at a time when virtually all of Europe was under autocratic absolutism, not only without the help of the British navy, but with the British navy actively engaged in the effort to destroy them.

Now, grown to a nation of 130,000,000, Mr. Stimson and those that share his emotions seem to feel that we have reverted to a colonial status, dependent upon the British Empire for our "protection."

THERESA H. RUSSELL.
Washington, July 4.

Socialist View

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Neither the Democratic nor Republican candidates, says a recent Letter-to-the-Editor writer, would, unless it were forced upon him, declare war and send our young men to foreign soil.

The writer uses the phrase "unless it were forced upon him" as if to say that our involvement in World War, Part II, would be caused by an external force, wholly beyond our control.

The causes of war, say we Socialists, are more fundamental than that. Basically, they are brought about by economic rivalry between financial interests. Bankers and industrialists of all nations compete with each other in their efforts to exploit the markets and gain possession of the raw materials in lands beyond their own borders.

PAUL SIMMONS,
Secretary, Young People's Socialist League.

"Flag Saluters"

I for one have no patience with professional flag saluters. I mean by that people who are always making a parade of their patriotism, jumping up and down at parades, etc., every time a flag passes and generally making a public nuisance of themselves. It is their kind who are always persecuting small religious denominations, who are opposed to external manifestations of devotions to temporal power.—C. M. Dodson, Falls Church, Va.

The Post Impressionist

The Charmer

He picked me up just outside Commerce, and the first thing he said was, "This wind is rapidly reaching gale proportions, isn't it?"

He said it charmingly, with a flashing smile that would have done him credit at a debutante tea. His voice was rich, deep, smothered in culture.

My "It certainly is," the best I could manage while I struggled to keep my skirts under control, sounded embarassingly flat by comparison.

After just the right silence he held his copy of the latest newspaper so I could see the headlines . . . that was the day the French stopped fighting . . . and remarked, "A dreadful business." You felt his well-bred concern, his intelligent interest.

With all the suavity of a top-flight news commentator, he continued, "The most truly shocking thing is the treachery in high places. Take the affair of the Meuse River, for instance."

There followed, in the smoothest flow of words, a careful analysis of a whole situation. The name of each place, of each general, was rendered in faultless French, spoken with an ease which could only have come from travel abroad.

There is no use pretending I wasn't impressed. When he paused, I felt the urge to say something brilliant, something witty. He must have seen me mouthing possibilities, for he waited courteously. The best I could achieve was that old dinner-party standby, a question.

"What do you think the French defeat will mean for us?"

He responded beautifully, but as if politely reluctant to monopolize the conversation, he spoke more briefly, and with inspired skill, changed the subject to local traffic conditions.

Don't ask me how he made the transition graceful. I just know he did, for I found myself denouncing quite heatedly my favorite trouble spots, suggesting lights for Q and Wisconsin.

This brought from him a short but moving eulogy on the beauties of historic Georgetown. His ideas were enlivened by comparisons to other cities, New Orleans, Beaufort, Berlin, London, but no one could have accused him of bragging. He seemed, rather, to be searching for some other places I'd been, so that when we had exhausted Georgetown, we could progress easily to another location. He finally mentioned New York, and in my eagerness, I embarrassed us both.

"I lived in New York before I came to Washington." I felt like a child boasting of having been to the city. It sounded bald, almost stingy after his glowing sentences.

But he did not let me suffer in silence. "New York," he said, "is like no other place on earth. The tempo, the temper of the people set it apart. I've always liked spending a little time there in the fall."

You could see him descending on the town in October, to stay for the season . . .to go to the Met., to coming-out parties, to 21, to the Horseshow . . .

"I think it's a mistake, in some ways, they're planting trees on Sixth avenue," he continued.

For the first time, I felt a slight annoyance. I agreed with him, but I was just getting ready to say the same thing myself, and now I was left dangling.

Then I heard myself babbling, "It's the Ninth Avenue El I hate to see go. It was so handy for us to get uptown on in the morning."

I could have cut my tongue out, once I'd said it, because to one who knew New York, I'd given myself dead away. Anyone who takes the Ninth Avenue El uptown to work lives in a definitely wrong section of town.

I'll give him credit, though; he did try to rise above my stupid blunder. "Greenwich Village is a charming section, isn't it?"

Bless him, as if he didn't know that the "charming" part of the Village is several blocks east of that awful El!

To cover the painfully slow death of my confusion he told some amusing anecdotes about an artist friend of his who lived in MacDougall Alley . . . MacDougall Alley, where the rents begin in the hundreds.

I don't know how he did it, but he finished just in time. With a pedigreed version of a flourish he drew up in front of my apartment, accepted the fifty cents graciously and was gone.

I know Washington taxi drivers are unusual, but are they all men-about town? J. T. C.

Clarity At Last

By Dorothy Thompson

U. S. May Face United Europe

THINGS BECOME clearer and clearer. Soon they will be so obvious that the blindest eye can see.

Saturday's newspapers publish four items of gravest concern to the United States.

First: Germany declares the Monroe Doctrine untenable except as it includes Germany as well as Britain.

Second: The Petain government severs relations with Great Britain.

Third: The Petain government receives the "consent" of the Axis powers to use its ships against Great Britain, and Gibraltar is bombed by French planes.

Fourth: Neutral diplomats predict that Nazis will open a "peace offensive" against Great Britain. If the last is successful, a united Nazi-dominated Europe will face the United States, which will be isolated, without a single friend or ally in the whole world.

LET US LOOK at what we have done. Before this war ever broke out we passed a neutrality act which tied the United States hand and foot. The Administration bill succeeded in lifting the embargo on arms to the Allies, but it retained strangulating provisions. The assumption behind both versions of the neutrality act and behind the isolationist movement was that the war in Europe does not concern us. It was just one of those recurrent European quarrels, which would result in the changing of this boundary or that. It was no concern either of the United States or of the Western Hemisphere.

Such aid as we could give the Allies, in the form of goods paid for in cash, in harmony with every traditional law, was hampered by the dilatoriness of the Allies, plus a constant fear on their part that even these shipments might be halted because of the huge isolationist propaganda in the United States, by the necessity of preserving their gold resources, since credit was barred, and by the fact that nothing could be transported in American bottoms.

MEANWHILE, France has been defeated, and now observe the nature of that defeat. The government of France has changed and a new government has taken its place. This government does not withdraw, defeated, from the war, but, in effect, it joins the Axis powers, putting what remains of the French fleet and air force at the disposal of the Axis, as well, we may presume, as the financial reserves.

Tomorrow Britain will be defeated, or, with her recent and last ally in active opposition to her, will make peace. In either event, the following things will happen: the present British government, which is pro-American, will resign or be ousted. A pro-Nazi government will take its place. Britain, then, with her entire fleet, will join the Axis powers.

And against whom will Pan-Europe, led by Germany, then be directed?

Against the Western Hemisphere.

And in the Western Hemisphere this Pan-Nazi-Europe need acquire no new bases. There is Greenland, owned by Denmark, now a Nazi protectorate, as near to the Northwest Territory of Canada as Norway is to Britain. There are all the British, Dutch and French possessions in the Caribbean. There is Canada, with 3,000 miles of unfortified frontier on the United States. There is South America, with every cultural and economic tie affiliating her with Europe—with Germany, France, Italy and Great Britain—not with us. There is Japan in the Far East.

Threatened north and south and east and west, we have one Navy, excellent outposts in the Pacific and none at all, if Britain goes, in the Atlantic. The Panama Canal is vulnerable.

The situation may occur in the middle of a Presidential campaign in which candidates are still discussing whether the New Deal is or is not a good thing. It may occur while this country, devoted to a most preposterous interpretation of the right of free speech and assembly, actually still allows the German-American Bund to encamp and train its cohorts and the Communist Party to organize inside our schools, social organizations and trade unions.

This situation may occur while Mr. Ford, in charge of one of the largest complexes of factories in the United States, strikes against the foreign policy of the United States in refusing to manufacture planes for Great Britain.

FREEDOM IS, among other things, the possibility of choice. The possible choices for the United States become fewer and fewer. Soon we may have only one choice: to join the Axis ourselves and accept Nazi control over our institutions, under some government "acceptable" to the Germans. Perhaps we shall now play a role similar to that of France and Great Britain. Perhaps ours will be the role, instead, of Austria, or Czecho-Slovakia or Denmark.

THE hundred and sixty-fourth anniversary of the Declaration of American Independence saw the end of a 36-year-old entente cordiale, which was the Western guaranty for us of the Monroe Doctrine. It saw the collapse of the 65-year-old constitution of the French Republic. And the new constitution, according to M. Laval, is to be drafted "on the lines of the Constitution of the United States, of Italy, Germany and Portugal." M. Laval has certainly handed himself a job.

IF BRITAIN falls, it is preposterous for us to think that we can defend the Western Hemisphere. We shall have our hands more than full defending North America. We ought to give up immediately all interest in the Far East. We shall need our Navy and air force right here, for home defense.

The British fleet, under the control of the present government, could still be saved for us, but not if we retain our present concept of neutrality. For what guaranty has Britain that her fleet will not be used against her and against Canada? Now is the time either to accept Nazi domination and know what it will mean to American independence and American institutions, or to show such clarity of vision and such generosity that it includes everything for Britain except active military support.

OTHERWISE, tomorrow we shall have isolation; not splendid isolation, but awful isolation.

Fair Enough

No Second Love

THANKS TO John D. Capeci, of Port Chester, N. Y., it is possible today to present clearly the sentiments of a native American who retains affection for Italy and to discuss those sentiments from the standpoint of those who feel no tie to any other country.

Mr. Capeci says I have yet to learn that "the United Stateser of Italian origin is as fine and upright a citizen as the descendant of any other race; that Italy's contribution to the United States has been very, very great; that every United Stateser of Italian origin lives first for the United States."

But that does not mean, he says, that the same man has not a second love.

"For everyone in the United States has a second love," he writes, "and, the country consisting of peoples of every land, it is but natural that these same peoples retain affections for their erstwhile lands. To think otherwise is infantile."

First, let me say that I have never disparaged the honor of citizenship of "the United Stateser of Italian origin."

I have, however, pointed out that some Americans of Italian origin or blood have silently acquiesced in the most hateful disparagement of the American people by the Italian press, but have been quick to resent truthful comment regarding Italy.

I WONDER if Mr. Capeci has ever denounced with equal passion, or even taken mild exception to, the constant hostility of the official Italian press toward the country for which he "lives first." After all, when Mussolini's press calls the United States a nation of gangsters that goes for Mr. Capeci. And if he does not resent it he has no right to object to expressions of resentment by other Americans who have no "second love." If he doesn't mind being called a gangster he speaks only for himself.

I realize, of course, that Americans who feel as he does toward Italy have been put on a spot, but submit that it was Mussolini who put them on the spot. But he certainly doesn't notice the feelings of all Americans of Italian origin, for there are many others who detest Fascism and feel not pride but humiliation for the old country under the Duce.

Love is a wonderful mystery, so perhaps it were a mistake even to try to understand the affection for Italy of which Mr. Capeci speaks. But he has opened the discussion and thus invites the observation that Italy wasn't very kind to her people who emigrated to the United States by thousands to escape hunger, oppression and ignorance. And Mr. Capeci presumably has never even seen Italy except, perhaps, as a tourist. Why, then, this "affection" for Italy? Did Italy give his immigrant parents or grandparents a break?

I do not agree that everyone in the United States has "a second love." That principle has been generally disastrous in domestic relations, and it will be equally embarrassing in civic relation. Neither Mussolini nor his boss, Adolf Hitler, would permit anyone claiming Italian or German citizenship to profess and serve a "second love" for the United States.

AS TO ITALY'S contribution to this country, I have always been skeptical. I claim that it was an even trade and that the United States owes nothing to Italy, Germany, France, Ireland, Britain or any other nation. Italy got rid of a lot of excess people, and the United States give these immigrants a chance in life. Over the years Italy has received back millions of dollars in remittances from these immigrants, and if we received music and culture from Italy we also received some contributions which were not unmitigated blessings, and Italy, in return, has received some contributions from this young nation, which has a fair record of achievement herself.

So there we stand. Mr. Capeci says Italy is his "second love," and in a manner of speaking, the mistress may villify the wife, who mustn't even talk back to the mistress. And when Americans who have no "second love" resent aspersions on their country by his Italy he says the quality of his citizenship is impugned. That may be so, but if anyone has impugned it he has.

You can't two-time Columbia. She is very affectionate, but she will not stand for any lallygagging.

FRENCH BATTLESHIP DUNKÉRQUE
Ernest K. Lindley finds no criticism in Washington of the British action at Oran which disabled the Dunkerque and destroyed other units of the French fleet

British Show Iron

By Ernest K. Lindley

Oran And Copenhagen

IN A RATHER extensive sampling of opinion in Washington, this correspondent has not struck a single adverse criticism of the British bombardment of the French naval vessels at Oran.

Some reaction was merely tolerant: "Regrettable, but necessary."

Some was highly laudatory, especially among people who have tended to be critical of the general conduct of British policy during the war. It revealed the iron which many had thought had rusted out of the British character and without which Great Britain has no chance of survival. It manifested a grim determination to carry on the struggle, which repudiated the limp defeatism which has been talked by sundry semiofficial or unofficial spokesmen for Britain in Washington.

Unpleasant as the decision must have been for the British cabinet and for the naval officers who had to execute it, it had a near-precedent in another time when Great Britain was in mortal peril. That was in 1807, when Great Britain was stripped of major allies on the continent by Napoleon's defeat of the Prussians at Friedland and his subsequent compact with Russia at Tilsit. France and her subjugated allies and Russia had 83 ships of the line. There remained on the continent two naval powers: Denmark with 18 ships of the line, and Portugal with nine. If Napoleon had won these his fighting strength on the seas would have been approximately equal to Great Britain's.

ANTICIPATING Napoleon's next moves, Canning, the British Foreign Minister—later a co-author of the Monroe Doctrine—sent an overwhelming naval force to Copenhagen to offer Denmark an alliance. In return for a subsidy and the promise of assistance on land if Napoleon attacked, Denmark was to place her fleet in British hands as a "sacred pledge." The Danes refused. The British bombarded Copenhagen, and a few weeks later sailed away with the Danish fleet, including 15 ships of the line, 15 frigates and 31 small vessels.

Canning would have preferred the alliance, just as Churchill would have preferred the active assistance of the French fleet and colonies in pursuance of the war. The seizure of the Danish fleet made Denmark an active, instead of perhaps a passive, ally of Napoleon, just as the British bombardment at Oran may make France an active ally of Hitler. Nevertheless, the seizure of the Danish fleet preserved British control of the seas, without which Britain would have fallen to Napoleon—and without which today Britain has no chance of winning even a stalemate with Hitler.

There is another new sign that the British are getting on their toes. After weeks of prodding they are beginning to take seriously the idea of evacuating British children to the dominions and the United States. If the British government gets busy and red tape is slashed on this side of the Atlantic, place can be found for these children just as rapidly as they can be ferried across the Atlantic.

A recent Gallup poll indicated that 5,000,000 American homes would be willing to take refugee children. Some of these households would require financial assistance to maintain the visiting children. But a large percentage undoubtedly would be willing—even eager—to take care of the children at their own expense. Thousands of them already have individually volunteered to do so.

WHAT COULD have been, by now, a considerable migration, has been held back by apathy in the British government and a deadening compound of red tape and misgivings in our own Government. Our State Department is stubbornly adhering to the regulations and practices adopted for excluding undesirable aliens and holding immigration to a minimum. Every child and mother or nurse is required to obtain an immigration visa. The granting of these visas is left to the discretion of individual American Consuls abroad. An American citizen willing to take a British child into his home must cable to the American Consul an affidavit that he will maintain the child as long as it remains in the United States, or to the age of 16. He must have his bank cable the consul that he is financially able to bear this burden. He must inform the consul how many dependents he already has. Even that is not enough: he must swear that he is a relative or close personal friend of the family whose child he wishes to bring to this country. Then a consul, sitting 3,000 miles away, decides whether or not this free-born American citizen is financially able to take a British child into his home.

That is not all. The annual British quota for immigrants is about 65,000. It has never yet been used. But under the law only 10 per cent of the immigration quota can be filled in any one month.

Hog-tied by its bureaucratic ways, the State Department has not even set up an agency for passing upon financial responsibility, which can be much more easily established in this country than by a consul sitting in London.

By State Department regulation, or by order of the President or the Attorney General, these children could be admitted on temporary visitors' visas. Later those who could not be returned could be given immigration visas.

There are other problems to be ironed out. Transportation is one. Under present arrangements, only a thousand or two a week can be sent both to Canada and the United States. This problem is not insoluble. Inertia and timidity both in the British and in the United States Governments stand between many thousands of children whose parents would like to send them to safety, and homes which are eager to take care of them at least until the battle of the British Isles has been won or lost.

The Monroe Doctrine Challenged

FROM THE TIME it was proclaimed in 1823 until the present moment the Monroe Doctrine has never been effectively challenged. During that long period successive waves of colonial expansion and imperialistic aggression swept over Africa, Asia, Oceania. The Americas, fortunately, remained outside the orbit of such activities.

Why? Was it because the individual American nations, fiercely proud of their new-won independence, were strong enough to beat off any European attackers that might desire to seize their territory? That was not true in the days of Monroe nor is it true today. With the possible exception of the United States, there is not a nation in this hemisphere which is in a position to defend itself against a powerful aggressor commanding the seas.

Was it then because the Monroe Doctrine was backed up by the rapidly growing weight which the United States could throw into the scales? Undoubtedly that was a factor. But between the Administration of President Monroe and that of President Cleveland the United States had no fleet to speak of, and, except in the period immediately following the Civil War, no army comparable to any military force possessed by any continental European power.

WHAT REALLY gave point and pertinence to the Monroe Doctrine during most of the period following the famous message to Congress was not the strength of the American nations, individually and collectively, but, first of all, the division of Europe, and, secondly, the circumstance that the maintenance of the independence of the American nations was as much in Britain's interest as in our own. As long as the European balance of power prevented any combination from arising on the continent powerful enough to challenge Great Britain, British sea power could be used to prevent any European aggressions in this hemisphere.

With Europe dominated by Hitler the European balance of power has been completely upset. The first bulwark of American defense is thus gone. The British fleet remains. But if Great Britain is overwhelmed, the second barrier to aggression in this hemisphere will also disappear, for it is inconceivable that Great Britain can be conquered unless and until British sea power is reduced to ineffectiveness.

Against that contingency the United States is now preparing with might and main. But sea power cannot be improvised. The plans for the expansion of the American fleet by 70 per cent over present strength will take between four and six years to complete. The emergency which we will have facing us will not wait that long. It will begin the moment Great Britain is defeated.

THE LIGHTNING flashes of danger are already on the horizon. Joachim von Ribbentrop's reply to the American warning to Germany not to interfere in the Western Hemisphere has not been published. But the substance of his note, as given out by the Department of State, is anything but reassuring. For, apparently, the Third Reich regards as untenable any American interpretation of the Monroe Doctrine which allows Great Britain and France and the Netherlands to possess territories in the New World while barring Germany.

In the event of a complete German triumph, two possibilities arise. One is the actual cession of Europe's American colonies to Germany at the end of the war. The other is German control over these colonies even while the sovereignty over them nominally remains in French, Dutch and British hands.

In anticipation of the first of these possibilities, preliminary action by the United States already has been taken. The American Government recently restated the policy first outlined by J. Q. Adams, when Secretary of State, and repeated by President Grant in his message to Congress in 1870, that European colonies in this hemisphere are not subject to transfer from one European power to another.

Germany, if victorious over Great Britain, may challenge that policy as contrary to international law. She may compel her victims to cede to her their dependencies in the New World. Then force will be the arbiter. If Germany feels strong enough to assert her right to such areas there is no reason to believe she will be restrained from doing so by words alone.

BUT A SECOND possibility, one more difficult to deal with, comes into view. What has happened in France shows how quickly an independent nation can become a subject nation, its government prepared to do the bidding of the conqueror. And if Hitler is victorious all governments in Europe will to a greater or lesser extent be puppet governments.

Thus there may be no actual transfer of territory from, say, France to Germany or from the Netherlands or Great Britain to Germany, only a transfer of power. The governments of the French and Dutch and British colonial areas in this hemisphere would nominally take their orders from Paris and the Hague and London but actually from Berlin.

We would thus be faced by the very difficult problem of deciding at what point power and sovereignty have been separated and what to do when power has been divorced from sovereignty. Nor will the problem be any easier if the decision is left to the community of American states. For if Germany is victorious that victory is likely to have a weakening effect on inter-American cooperation. There are other ways of conquering weak nations than by military means and more than one Latin-American nation is already in a position of extreme susceptibility to such methods.

United States Forests

YOU OWN ABOUT an acre and a third, whether you know it or not. At least, that's one way of putting the fact that the national forests of the United States amount to 176,000,000 acres, or one and a third acres for each citizen. And, in case that isn't enough to satisfy you, "Forest Outings" (United States Department of Agriculture, Forest Service, $1.25) adds that an acre is about the size of the grid-iron on a football field, which is the first serviceable definition of an acre I've ever met.

It's a handsome book, richly illustrated, and it leaves you feeling pretty proud of your acre and a third. For the Forest Service is one branch of the Government against which even the ruggedest individualist has no complaint. It began as sheer conservation; its recreation facilities have grown almost accidentally, and the foresters have had a hard time keeping up with the people who wanted to use the forests. In fact, there are foresters who grumble a bit about folks who "take to the road in an open car and return to the breast of nature to litter it up with banana peels and beer cans." Mostly, however, the foresters are pleased that 32,000,000 Americans (maybe some repeaters were included in that colossal count), drifted into the Nation's forests (which are distinct from the national parks) last summer. Twenty years ago the figure was about 3,000,000.

It isn't easy to keep up with the vagaries of the American people. They grumble at taxes, and they want service, in infinite variety. Lately, they've taken to winter sports with a mad passion, and the Forest Service is blamed because it can't keep up with the skiers. Nobody knows just how many Americans ski today. But the sports salesmen cheerfully report that whereas in 1935 Americans invested $417,000 in skis and snowshoes, in 1938 they spent $3,000,000 on skis, $6,000,000 in ski clothes and $15,000,000 in lodging at winter playgrounds, private and public.

A million and a half cattle and horses graze in the national forests, and 9,000,000 sheep and goats; that is a third less than were permitted in the forests a quarter of a century ago. The forests are cropped—last year the Government forest sales of lumber, Christmas trees, ferns and palms (from the Caribbean National Forest in Puerto Rico) totaled close to $5,000,000. The balance of use and conservation is always a moot question in the Forest Service; but the undeniable fact is that today management is necessary to preserve the primitive. The Forest Service sets aside intangible "wilderness areas;" but even in those areas a certain amount of control of predatory beasts and of fire prevention, is essential. Keep the campers and smokers out, and you remove some of the fire menace; the fact remains that lightning sets some 4,000 fires a year in the national forest alone.

"Forest Outings" is the work of 30 foresters, edited and corelated by Russell Lord. But the foreword identifies some of the best passages as the work of the late Robert Marshall, long chief of recreation and lands in our Forest Service. Mr. Marshall was a New York City boy who took to the woods with a Manhattan passion.

It was Marshall, too, who wrote a lyric passage about the untamed mountain wilderness of the Wind River country in Wyoming, another about the Alaska Mountains, and still another bit about the wild beauty of the primitive canoe waters of northern Minnesota. Perhaps he wrote also the tributes to the tulip poplars of the coves in the Great Smokies—Eastern trees that reach 100 feet toward the sky before putting out a branch; to the hemlocks of Pennsylvania, the lodgepoles of Colorado, the Douglas firs and Sitka spruces of Washington and Oregon . . . And assuredly it was Marshall who descended to prose in the sober effort to reckon how these great forests could be made accessible even to Americans without automobiles. That was his passion and his pride.

NEW THOUGH THEY be, the national forests have roots that go deep into the American past. The old New England commons, and the parks William Penn laid out for Philadelphia, were their forerunners in what was not yet even a horse-and-buggy age. As early as 1803 there was a resort house at Crawford Notch; the first Summit House on Mount Washington dates back to 1824. Brigham Young had a keen sense of natural beauty; "Forest Outings" reprints a curious, careful invitation he issued to a "pic-nic" in a canyon in 1856.

Nelson B. Bell About the Showshops

Come Out Fighting, Boys, And May the Best Man Win!

Fight Films Now Legal on Local Screens; Free, New York Trip for Best Guessers; This, That and the Other About the Theater

PROBABLY THE GREATEST SURPRISE to the largest proportion of Friday's motion picture audiences came when the newsreel commentators announced that, with the President's signing of the bill nullifying the Federal law prohibiting the interstate transportation of fight films, it became possible to show actual fight scenes and not merely the uninteresting ring flubdub preceding and following them—or words to that effect.

BELL

Thereupon, before the startled eyes of all and sundry, Mr. Dempsey proceeded to belt Mr. Cowboy Luttrell out of the ring with devastating power and dispatch. Mr. Dempsey then remarked, in a boyish-voiced speech that came in short pants, that after a couple more months of training he, no doubt, would be able to make a better showing. If he has in mind getting in there with any of the so-called "top flight" heavyweights, he will have to. He was as wide open as the Grand Canyon.

That, however, is less important than the fact that a law as dead as the Dodo has been erased from the statute books. I believe credit for this happy eventuation is chiefly due Senator Warren Barbour, of New Jersey, himself former amateur heavyweight champion of the world. However that may be, some deadwood has been tossed into the fire.

Next to the Volstead Act, the anti-fight film law was kicked around more universally and more vigorously than any the authorities have attempted to enforce—or not, as the case may have been—in recent years. Quite obviously, it was as full of loopholes as a fish net. The ban, of course, never was against the exhibition of prizefight films, but solely against their transportation from one State to another. It all harked back to the wave of violence that swept the country when "Li'l Artha" Johnson took Mr. Jeffries apart at Reno, Nev., on July 4, 1910. Justification of the law long since seems to have been removed and the law itself should have been, long ago.

The first Washington picture house to take full-time advantage of the new dispensation is A. E. Lichtman's Republic Theater, on U street near Fourteenth, northwest, where the Joe Louis-Arturo Godoy and the Baer-Galento fight films took possession of the screen on Friday. Joe Louis, the idol of his race—at least in the realm of sports—and a Washington week-end visitor, dropped into Mr. Lichtman's Lincoln Theater Saturday night to see "Twenty-Mule Team" and then ambled up the street to watch himself whale the daylights out of Senor Godoy and Mr. Baer render a similar service to Mr. Galento. It will be interesting to note what use the downtown cathedrals of the celluloids make of the sudden leniency of the law—if any.

If a three-day, free-gratis-for-nothing trip to New York and the World's Fair is what you are hankering for, just guess the number of people who will attend Loew's Palace Theater during the week beginning Friday to see Mickey Rooney and the Hardy family in "Andy Hardy Meets Debutante." To the man and woman—individually, I take it, and not as a team—most closely estimating the week's attendance, will be awarded a three-day trip to New York and the Flushing meadows, with a suite for each at the Hotel New Yorker. This business has been rigged up between the Loew managemnt and the Ross Jewelry Co., facing the Capitol on F street. Contestants must register their guesses with the Ross Co. The deadline is Thursday, July 18.

Comes wire No. 4,288,562, for the week, from Manager Hardie Meakin, of RKO-Keith's, to wit: "Washingtonians and the town's visitors continue to manifest so much interest in 'My Favorite Wife,' starring Irene Dunne and Cary Grant, that we simply have to continue its engagement beyond Sunday. Indications are for still another week." So now you know—for a minute, anyhow.

Generalissimo Gene Ford is busy these days smoking up original stage presentations for Loew's Capitol audiences. Already he has puffed himself into vast enthusiasm over "Follies of 1910" and "The Ballad of America" items that will come along with August—with more to follow out of the dream box.

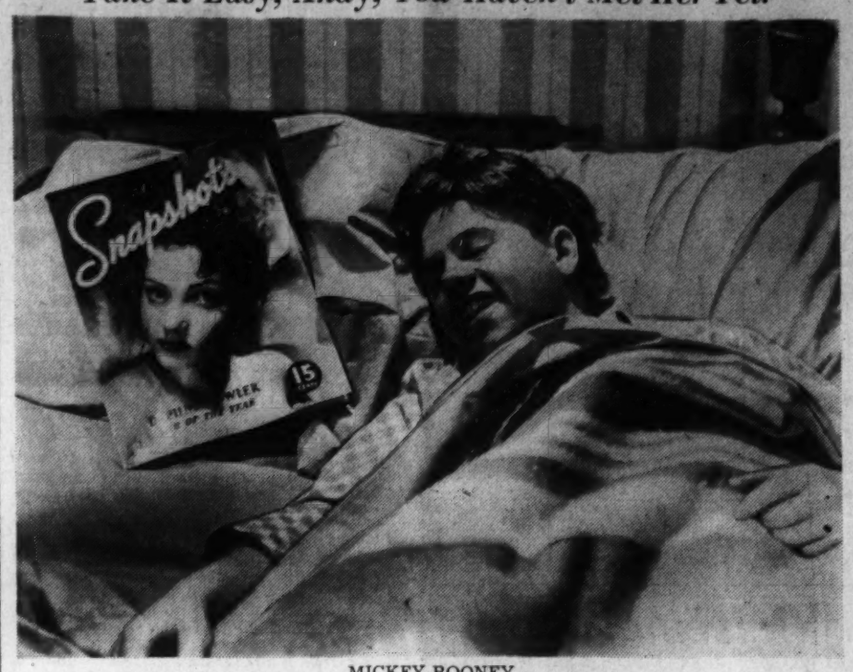
Dots and Dashes

This week's preview screenks begin today with "All This and Heaven Too;" tomorrow "Four Sons"—the one, coming to the Earle on Friday, the other, to Loew's Capitol, same day . . . "Four Sons" is the one in which Eugenie Leontovich, star of the stage version of "Grand Hotel," has leaped into screen stardom in a single bound . . . Yeah, more later . . . Today the Washington Variety Club pays honor to Dr. William P. Herbst's seventy-second birthday and 30 years in "show business," at a luncheon in the Willard at 1 . . . Today also is another "kiddies' day" on the Wilson Line's S. S. Mount Vernon and at Marshall Hall . . . Everything half-price . . . For the youngsters, that is . . . The Roadside Theater breaks out "Sweetbrier" tonight, as the Cross Roads goes into its second week of "A Woman's a Fool" . . . The Catholic University players leap across three centuries and half a continent this week, from "The Far Off Hills" to Moliere's knockabout comedy, "The Miser" . . . It will be acted for the general public on Thursday night . . . The Little Theater comes up on Wednesday with Alfred Hitchcock's "The Man Who Knew Too Much."

Famous-Last-Words Note

All out, end of the line.

Take It Easy, Andy, You Haven't Met Her Yet!



MICKEY ROONEY enjoys the nightmare of infatuation in one of the early scenes in "Andy Hardy Meets Debutante," to be seen, beginning Friday, on the screen at Loew's Palace Theater. Judy Garland, in the role of Andy's guardian angel, scores as emphatically as she did with him in "Babes in Arms." Lewis Stone, Fay Holden, Cecilia Parker and Sara Haden remain the other members of the Hardy family

'Swing' Bill Hits Bull's-Eye At the Atlas

Frank X. Silk Revue And Gaye Dixon Are the Headliners

Presenting an array of talent to please the most ardent "swing" fan, the stage fare at the Atlas Theater through Tuesday finds "The Princess of Swing," Gaye Dixon, back by popular demand, contributing a "sock" performance, the equal of which never has been seen at this house.

In rendering "Dark Town Strutters' Ball," "Rosetta" and the old reliable "Old Man Mose," for her encore, she was forced to beg off from further effort with a curtain speech at yesterday's matinee performance.

Another stage favorite, Frank X. Silk, heads his own revue, including the "Yvonettes," five versatile terpsichorean beauties, presenting novel ensemble numbers and specialty precision dances, assisted by Wilson Lang, the popular Irish tenor, who scores heavily with several well-sung vocals. Frank Silk handles the comedy end of the bill and several of his bits, while old, had the house in an uproar. He is still the "old master," when it comes to funny business.

The bill is rounded out with a double feature screen program.

The New Yorker

By Leonard Lyons

New York, July 7.

POLITICS DEPT.: Shortly before the balloting was to begin at the Republican National Convention, Wendell Willkie telephoned David Dubinsky, head of the powerful International Ladies Garment Workers Union . . . Willkie, who soon was to upset all political tradition, wanted Dubinsky to dine with him on Friday . . . "Sorry, but I'm going to be out of town on Friday," was the union leader's message . . . "Is that a touch of 'Political Sickness'," Willkie suggested. Then the balloting was held, and he accomplished the upset . . . "Frankly," explained Dubinsky later, "who the hell thought he'd get the nomination?"

REALTY DEPT.: The Jimmy Walker estate in Sands Point has been leased by Mrs. Ickelheimer—daughter of Peter Lehman—and her husband. For the new occupancy, the nursery in that home was redecorated and converted into another bedroom . . . Last week a solicitous friend asked the Ickelheimers: "How did the nursery turn out?" . . . "Oh, it's fine now," was the reply. "It's very satisfactory. In fact, Herbert Hoover slept there last night."

SCHOOL DEPT.: When Arthur Hornblow, the producer and husband of Myrna Loy, hired Robert Thorin, the French playwright, he said: "In all our dealings you talk to me in French and I'll answer you in English. It will help my French, which I speak fluently, and at the same time you'll be able to learn to speak English quickly" . . . Thorin agreed, and then attended his first story conference. "What do you think?" Hornblow asked him, "but remember—tell me in French and I'll answer in English" . . . Thorin liked the story and in French expressed his unqualified admiration for the plot . . . Hornblow smiled, nodded, and—in English—replied: "You're right. You're absolutely right. I agree with you—it stinks."

HEALTH DEPT.: Alice Faye collapsed just as she was about to start making the new film, "Down Argentine Way," and was removed, unconscious, to the hospital where an immediate operation was ordered . . . The hospital officials notified Miss Faye's manager about the necessity for an emergency operation. The manager forthwith relayed this information to Bill Koenig, of Twentieth Century Fox . . . "What do you mean, operation?" Koenig protested. "You can't operate; Darryl won't stand for it."

SPORTS DEPT.: Oscar Levant tried to induce his friend, Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt, to purchase the Brooklyn Dodgers baseball team. Vanderbilt, head of the Belmont race track and proprietor of one of the finest racing stables in this country, was reluctant to spread his activities into another field of sport. "What can I do in baseball, Oscar?" he asked . . . "For you it should be swell," Levant assured. "Just imagine—when the slow-footed Phelps hits a single you could put Seabiscuit in to run for him."

LOCAL NEWS: Steinbeck is on his way back to California. He completed the movie he was writing in Mexico, had planned to stay there until the elections—when a revolution is expected—but decided that it won't happen . . . Jack Kirkland flew to Hollywood this week and will listen to further negotiations for the movie sale of his "Tobacco Road" . . . Irene Castle will revive the Castle Walk when she appears in summer stock. Her partner will be Alex Fisher, of the dance team of Harrison and Fisher . . . W. G. Van Schmus, of Radio City Music Hall, was operated upon this week at St. Luke's Hospital . . . If President Roosevelt or any other New Dealer receives the Democratic nomination the Liberty League will be revived with substantial backing.

EMPLOYMENT DEPT.: Hugo Butler, one of the coauthors of the Tom Edison film stories, declined an offer to write "Pierre of the Plains" for Edgar Selwyn . . . He wondered whether he had made a blunder and asked some advice of his father, Frank Butler—who wrote "Road to Singapore" and 50 other hits for Paramount . . . "What makes you doubt the wisdom of your decision?" asked the senior Butler . . . "Because Selwyn wrote it and acted in it 25 years ago," Hugo explained. "He's pretty fond of that story and may resent my turning it down" . . . "Don't be silly," his father reassured. "I turned it down eleven years ago. He resented it then. He probably resents it only every eleven years."

LETTER TO THE EDITOR: "I'm in good shape, and my kisser has returned to its natural contour," writes George Jessel, "but it will be a few weeks before I can put an ad in Variety, saying: 'JESSEL—SOME HEALTHY KID.' Folks out here in Hollywood aren't as war crazy as they are in the East, but nevertheless for the first time they're realizing there's a world east of Culver City . . . How is your little son? I was almost sure I saw him at Ciro's out here the other night, but I was mistaken. It was Alexander Carr."

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

By International News Service

Hollywood, July 7.—Sonja Henie received Darryl Zanuck's warmest blessing a few minutes after she became Mrs. Dan Topping. The bride was given permission to have a long honeymoon and holiday and time off for her ice skating revue. That means "Sun Valley," her next picture, won't start until fall. Henry Fonda and Richard Greene are slated for her two co-starring partners. There are two male leads in the story. Milton Sperling has been assigned to co-produce and write the adaptation.

LOUELLA O. PARSONS

I talked to Sonja both before and after she was married and of course I talked to the happy bridegroom after the ceremony. She and Dan were like a pair of kids and both said they wished that some of their Hollywood friends could have been at their wedding.

Oscar Homolka, the famed Austrian actor, arrived in town just in time for the Fourth of July, and to complete arrangements with Joe Pasternak to be one of the seven sinners in Marlene Dietrich's picture, "Seven Sinners." One of the most interesting of the sinners is John Wayne, who gets the break of his life playing opposite la Dietrich. Albert Dekker and Broderick Crawford are also in the line-up of Dietrich movie boy friends, while Anna Lee, English actress, plays the other woman.

Robert Montgomery, who endeared himself to the British and French alike when he enrolled as an ambulance driver, will not return to M.-G.-M. until October.

Snapshots of Hollywood Collected at Random: Errol Flynn arrived from Mexico late last Friday afternoon on a stretcher. He had a fever of 103 and a consultation was ordered immediately; Bing Crosby's brother, Larry, and Mrs. Larry have said adieu to marriage. She filed papers for separate maintenance through her attorney, Jerry Mayo; Greta Keller, singer at Cafe Lamaze, also took her troubles to court and filed suit for divorce against Joseph Sargent; Jimmy Cagney has dropped 26 pounds on a fighter's diet.

Alice Faye and her nurse were at the tropics. Although Alice says there will be no reconciliation with Tony Martin, her friends wouldn't be greatly surprised if she changed her mind; Shirley Ross and Ken Dolan are saying farewell to Hollywood. Shirley will continue on the stage; the Brenda Marshall-Bill Holden marriage will take place just as soon as she gets her final decree.

Wayne Morris, looking anything but happy, all by herself at the Tropich; Gene Raymond's personal appearance is a great success in San Francisco; Frances Langford is entertaining her father, who lives in Florida; the Edmund Lowes are hosting a party in honor of the Lin Howards; Boris Karloff claims to have perfected a black orchid. He is sending it to to the New York horticultural show; the Jack Warners entertained with a Fourth of July party. Everybody dressed informally and sat around a pool where dinner was served and a good time was had by all.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

Held Over Today
BAER-GALENTO FIGHT FILM

In Hollywood

By Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, July 7.

After Louis B. Mayer caught his foot in a gopher hole and crutched his way through the studio for a couple of days, he had to discard them quickly for fear he'd cripple the studio. Everyone shot out of their chairs like cannon balls, tripping themselves to open doors for the big boss. Crutches were set aside so the boys could relax.

HOPPER

Artie Shaw certainly knows how to time his public appearances. He said plenty about jitterbugs and swing bands, but got an air job and timed his separation from Lana Turner perfectly. Poor Lana! If she wants to continue her career, she'd better get wise to his shenanigans. She left him Saturday, went to live with Connie Moore. Monday she attended the Allen-Burns broadcast, where they denied a separation. But it didn't take long to break down that story. If she isn't careful, she'll miss the boat, and even Metro won't bother with her. I feel sorry for her mother, who's worked so hard to give the girl a chance.

It didn't take Mickey Rooney long to win back public favor when the fans started thinking he was a show-off. Metro's Les Peterson was put on the job and has been with him ever since.

When that Metro gang marshal their forces, it's something to shout about. At the Red Cross races at Hollywood Park every time they blew a bugle and you thought the next race was coming up, it was a Metro star. There were Gable, Tracy, Loy, Lamarr and Jimmy Stewart, each one timing his entrance perfectly. It was Tracy's first trip to the track.

Rosemary Lane, looking like a fashion plate, lost steadily, but the last race paid her $44.60 for $2—they heard her shout of joy in the next county!

Myrna Loy wore a bit of greenery with an old-fashioned bouquet on her head—a hoop skirt would have gone with it. Irene Dunne, in chartreuse and a big blow-away hat, buried her nose in the racing form.

He-men Richard Dix and Victor Jory, back from mountain location for "Cherokee Strip," more than met their match up there. "I've met 'em tough," said Dix, "but those cowboys up in Long Valley use rattlesnakes for bull whips, fork mountain lions while their ponies graze, and drink white mule with carbolic acid for a chaser." They had to dilute the native coffee 50 per cent—one of the actors took a swig full strength and passed out! Sounds to me like a perfect place for Hitler's vacation.

Ken Murray was heckling Fanny Brice at the Pirates' Den the other night when her six-foot-five son walked into the place. Ken simmered down to a wheeze.

Vic MacLaglen has sent a wire to Elsie, the prize Borden cow who goes to work for Towne and Baker in "Little Men," offering her a padded cell in his dairy on his Fresno ranch. Vic says that even a cow has nerves—and he fears for Elsie's sanity—working with Towne and Baker!

A fan, C. Fanton wrote, "During 'Waterloo Bridge,' when everyone was intensely interested in the picture, a boy's shrill, treble voice rang out, 'Mama! He kissed her six times. Papa only kisses you once—what's the matter with him?'"

The Gentler Sex

—By Malvina Lindsay

'Summer Is a-Comin' In Loud Sing Cuckoo . . . .'

(With apologies to a thirteenth century poet.)

Yes, summer is really here, because:

Mournful black dresses are appearing in the shop windows and humid days are bringing out legions of hot weather "widows" in close-fitting jerseys and crepes.

Wearers of white shoes are beginning to feel a little uncertain of themselves and flowered hats are acquiring that country belle look.

Customers in search of cotton frocks are informed by haughty saleswomen that there may be "a few left."

Brightly efficient women are encountered downtown doing their Christmas shopping and buying next winter's clothes at clearance sales.

Exhausted parents have begun to count how many more weeks remain until the opening of school.

College girls are estimating how many new sweaters they will need in September and pondering over whether to get sophisticated, "umph" evening dresses or romantic little girl frocks for next season's proms.

Householders are calculating how much they can save by buying their winter's supply of coal now.

The woman who couldn't find a summer hat she could wear has decided that it doesn't matter anyway as she'll be getting a smart little black felt or velvet now in "no time."

People are saying it's really too late to buy bathing suits and besides all the really good looking ones have been grabbed up.

Nature lovers who were planning to picnic a lot in outdoor beauty spots have decided that the flies, chiggers and mosquitoes have gotten there ahead of them and they might as well wait and have weiner roasts in November.

What kind of a fur coat to buy at the August sales has become the main topic in bridge circles.

Business girls are worrying over how they can go on vacation now in their old "summer" clothes and are wondering if it wouldn't be better to wait another week and buy a fall outfit to dazzle the folks in the home town.

An occasional dead leaf appears on the sidewalk and sets pedestrians to resolving that they will really ride over the Skyline Drive this October.

Socialites meeting each other no longer have to apologize for being in town, but can refer vaguely to having "returned."

Elderly men are beginning to prophesy on hot days that it will be a cold winter.

Women reclining under electric fans are comforting themselves with the thought that you can't do anything in the heat anyway and that come fall they will really get down to work.

Neighbors of radio addicts are figuring how long it will be until the windows can be closed against stentorian, unctuous voices and they can be alone at last.

Workers are checking the calendar to see how many days before the next holiday—Labor Day.

Everyone past 30 is going around exclaiming "How time flies! Why, fall will be here before we know it!"

Clothes Are Sold Cafeteria Style

New York (AP).—Would you like to buy your dresses cafeteria style? Serve-yourself departments are being opened in stores throughout the country, following the phenomenal success of a low-priced cafeteria store here.

Dresses are hung on racks according to size. You pick the ones you'd like to try on, and take them into the fitting room. No salesperson assists you. Nobody says, "It looks lovely on you, madam." But when you've made your choice a cashier takes your money.

To Meet the Midsummer Hat Problem

LEFT—One of the most dashing of the midseason hats is this firebrand red velveteen designed by Harry Solomons. Note the peaked jester's crown pierced with a quill. Although devil-may-care in silhouette this hat stays well put on the head.

LEFT, BELOW—Another hat that conforms to natural headlines is this strawberry colored shantung with buckle and band of red and white polka dotted silk.

RIGHT, BELOW—Both glamorous and flattering is this John Frederic's felt. It is the head fitting type that film people buy by the dozen now that hatlessness is passe.

Gaily Colored Corduroy Hats Are in Season

By Marshall Adams
The Post Fashion Editor.

THE IN-BETWEEN hat season is on and with it comes a more practical selection than is usual at this time of year. It always seemed foolish to us to bring out black velvets in midsummer, and most of the milliners must have felt the same way because they are now featuring bright-hued felts and velveteens rather than collections of "cave" or "blackout" blacks.

After two months of wishy-washy whites and pastels, the gayly colored corduroy or velveteen looks good, especially for late vacationers and later for back-to-town costumes. The corduroys are often bowler-shaped with flexible crowns for easy packing, while the felt fedora, ribbon cloche or swagger-peaked sports hats are pliable enough to slip into corners of week-end bags. Felts, in particular, have never been more fetching for midseason wear since milliners just got wise to customers' desires for hats which fit both the back and front of the head. The new hats are becoming, too, because of a minimum of trimming—maybe a scalloped edge, a rakish feather or a simple puggree or grograin band.

The reason behind the newer, more functional and more flattering hats is the hatless craze which went to America's head this summer. Fewer hats were sold from January through April of this year than during the same period of last year, an alarming figure for hard-hit milliners to face. The Millinery Stabilization Committee set up a bureau to discover the cause, and found, among other things, that women (especially college girls), regarded the hats of recent seasons as just too absurd and unwearable. A ray of hope now lies in the fact that both college men and movie moguls have promised to get their respective women back into the kinds of hats they favor—the simple, unpretentious hat that stays on the head when put there.

Corn Fritters an Excellent Luncheon or Supper Dish

ONCE the fritter habit is established, there is many a choice meal in store. Fritters can be made of a number of flavorsome ingredients such as apple or banana. They are a grand food for Sunday night supper. Pineapple fritters and corn fritters both made excellent companion foods for baked ham. Sunday supper is no trick to prepare, if you have some prebaked ham, corn fritters, a tossed vegetable salad, some gelatin chilling in the refrigerator with which you can serve fresh fruit, and a beverage, hot or cold as the weather may warrant. Here is a recipe for making the fritters:

Corn Fritters

Drain 1 12-ounce can whole-kernel corn. Mix and sift 1 cup flour, 1 teaspoon baking powder, 1 teaspoon salt and 2 teaspoons sugar. Beat 2 egg yolks; add the corn to eggs, then combine with dry ingredients. Beat 2 egg whites; fold in. Drop by teaspoons in shallow fat or salad oil—about 2 inches deep. Heat to 375 degrees. Fry until golden brown. Serves 6.

Fritter sirups can be made quickly from any of the whole-fruit nectars. When you open a can of nectar you have something besides juice, for the fruit pulp itself in liquefied form has been included. Here is a sirup recipe you will want for your fritters.

Apricot Nectar Sirup

Cream ½ cup butter with ⅜ cup honey in a saucepan. Add ⅜ cup apricot nectar and bring to a boil, stirring frequently. Let boil briskly 3 or 4 minutes. Add ¼ cup chopped blanched almonds, if desired, and cool to lukewarm. Makes approximately 1 3-3 cups sirup.

Your Figure, Madame!

Foot Ills Affect Posture; Sour Disposition Fallen Arches May Be Corrected by Exercise

GOSSIP has it that one fine old gentleman with the courage of his convictions gets up at dawn to walk barefoot in the dew at New York Central Park. We've never got up early enough to check this, but the idea is not nearly as eccentric as it may sound.

Walking barefoot is an extremely effective way of strengthening the foot muscles. If you are so lucky as to spend some time at the beach, make a habit of walking barefoot in the sand—the effort of walking in the shifting sand is marvelous for the feet.

Healthy Feet—Happy Disposition

After talking with Rosa Munde, we are convinced that the serious effect of abused feet on health, looks and disposition is not generally appreciated. Miss Munde for years has been helping New York women to solve their figure problems, specializing in spinal curvature corrective exercise.

"Most people over 30," Miss Munde declares, "either have fallen arches or are on their way to having them. The average person seems to depend entirely on walking for exercise and then doesn't walk! The little walking women do is done in high heels—which further weakens the metatarsals. There is also a general tendency to take on weight as one grows older and foot trouble increases with the addition of pounds. Weight reduction is the first step in the correction of the foot trouble of the excessively overweight person."

But if your weight is within range of normal, Miss Munde suggests a dandy set of exercises patterened on those ballet movements which give dancers such strong arches and nicely developed leg and thigh movements. And since Miss Munde promises that "when you start improving the feet, the legs also improve" you will find these exercises well worth your while.

Here They Are—Go to 'Em

1. Stand with the back against a heavy chair, hands on the chairback at the sides for support. Feet should be parallel, knees stiff, and the trunk should remain erect throughout. Kick alternate legs from the hips, bringing them up in front, and pointing the toes hard, turning them out to the side. Continue for eight counts with each leg. If this exercise is performed correctly, you will feel a strong pull on the muscles of the foot, leg, abdomen and hips.

To get in a waistline bender, add to the foregoing footwork: As you slide the right foot out to the side, bend acutely to the left, arching the right arm overhead but stretching the left arm out almost straight as you bend, so that you are exercising against resistance. When you slide the left foot out to the side, bend to the right, arching left arm overhead.

3. One of the best foot exercises is very simple: Stand facing the chairback with both hands on it for support. Have feet parallel, heels on floor. Bend the knees slightly and spring into the air. As you do so, straighten the knees and point toes hard. Come down on floor again with knees slightly bent, heels on floor, ready for next spring. Keep it up! If your chair is not heavy enough to support you, turn it so that the seat is under a desk—or use a straight chair under the desk for that purpose.

Those will be enough . . . and Miss Munde says that, "If you get a cramp in your foot while doing them, it's a sure sign that you need the exercise!"

'Fortunes' for Summer Parties

"Five, a lover gallant, true.
Six, some precious gift for you."

They're telling fortunes by the Magic Circle and having bushels of fun.

For everybody loves fortunes—and you'd never guess how easy it is to tell them by dice, cards, horoscopes, other ways, too.

In the Magic Circle, you roll three dice onto a circle of cardboard, or one drawn with chalk on a table. Then you add the numbers on the tops of the dice. Is the total 15? Says the ancient rhyme of the Magic Circle:

"Fifteen, foul play without—steer clear.
Sixteen, a long lost lover will reappear."

Each number has its fateful meaning in the rhyme and the luckiest is 18, promising romance, friends, wealth and your dearest wish!

Going on a picnic, date or party? Slip a deck of cards into your lunch basket or purse. When things get dull, shuffle the cards and, using the famed method of the Seven Gypsy Sisters, lift the veil of the future.

Does a three of hearts turn up? A three-year engagement is your fate. The eight of clubs? You'll have a date with a new "heart-throb."

Should Woman Encourage Beloved, Stormy Nephew's Desire to Marry Her Adopted Daughter? When Crossed, He Usually Packs Up and Leaves Home

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I have a nephew, 23 years old, who came to live with me three years ago after a quarrel with one of his brothers. It seems he was at fault, but when his mother chided him, he remained obstinate. He left home, came to me, told me about the quarrel and asked if he could stay on a while.

As I live on a farm and had no help at the time, I readily took him. Shortly afterward, his mother, who is my youngest sister, came to see how he was getting along and was well pleased with my good reports. She asked me to keep him as long as I could, as he showed a bad temper and kept bad company at home. As he seemed contented with me, I agreed. I began talking with him and found him very easy to manage. He took me into his confidence and I learned to love him (and he loved me) as dearly as if he were my own son. He never did anything—not even visit his family—without consulting me first.

Six months after he came to me, his mother died. Before her death, she asked me to look after him and I promised I would, because I feel that he is my boy now. He even calls me "mother." Well, four months ago his temper got the best of him for the first time since he has been here and he had a quarrel with my husband. He returned to his family and has lived there ever since. But I have been looking after him, making frequent trips over there, unknown to my family.

I have two married daughters living in the community, and an adopted daughter at home with me. Together we go to church every Sunday, where we see "my" boy—who started back to church to please me and now goes regularly. My married daughters seem to think I shouldn't bother with him any more, and one of them got very angry with me when she saw me talking with him after church. But I paid no attention to her, just as he pays no attention to anyone but me. I feel it is my duty to keep him going straight, if I can.

Partly due to my prayers and efforts, he recently got a job with the Government, and now I learn that he and my adopted daughter are in love with each other. They have seen each other at church every Sunday since he left our place and they have been corresponding regularly. She is a very good girl and never goes any place without me. She has never had any boy friends because she never was interested in boys until she learned to love my nephew. But my husband hates the lad, since their quarrel, and so does one of my daughters.

I know they are going to be very bitter when they hear that these youngsters want to get married. But the boy is a good boy, except for his quick temper. What should I do? Should I stop her from seeing him? Or should I encourage their love? My own daughters never allowed me to interfere with their choice; so why should I allow them to tell this girl whom to marry? Why shouldn't she marry the boy she loves? And why shouldn't I keep up my good work with him, regardless of what they think? Please advise me.

PATIENT MOTHER.

Boy's Runaway Habit Bodes Ill for Marriage

DEAR P. M.: In view of your utterly loving confidence in your nephew's goodness of heart, it would be rather illogical for you to try to dissuade your adopted daughter from marrying him. However, that sullen trait of character which prompts him to pack his belongings and leave, once his anger is aroused, doesn't promise much happiness—nor any security—for the woman who marries him.

Leaving home when crossed, rebuked or punished is a willful child's reaction. The person who carries such a gesture over into his adult years is exhibiting almost disastrous weakness of character (of the "can't-take-it" variety), and a somewhat moronic mind, to boot. Such behavior is both vengeful and irresponsible. It is bound in the long run, to bring only misery to the poor sport who practices it, and to all those who love him.

The individual's life, at best, is scarcely more than a continuous struggle to make a reasonable, profitable adaptation to harsh forces and circumstances over which he has little control. A man has his choice of two methods of adjustment. Either he learns, little by little, how to control himself, so as to get along with others. Or, spurning that effort, he is hammered into shape, or into ruin (depending upon his fiber), by the inexorable disciplinary pressure of public opinion and those circumstances which his wrong actions create.

You may find it easy to forgive and defend your nephew for running away, in a fit of anger, first from his parents' home and later from your home. But how would you feel if, at some future time, he abandoned his wife (your adopted daughter) because of some foolish quarrel with her? Suppose he left her with children, or penniless, or ailing and heartbroken? Then, I daresay, you would see his weakness in a different light—and would better understand your daughter's and your husband's attitude toward him now.

Love such as yours for your nephew is, of course, powerfully productive of good. And it may be that, if given a sufficiency of such charitable devotion, he would become a stable character, in time. Then, too, your adopted daughter may understand, as well as you, how to "manage" him; and may love him so much that the task would seem easy; or, at least, worthwhile. And such speculations cause one to wonder whether less interested, less informed and less sympathetic persons have any right to argue against (a) your continued "mothering" of him; or (b) your daughter's wish to marry him—if you and she are convinced that he has been more sinned against than sinning.

About the most I am prepared to say is that (1) while your husband and married daughters should not be allowed to dictate in the matter; (2) still, their arguments against the boy's trustworthiness should be seriously studied since, obviously, your partiality to him somewhat blinds you to common sense considerations.

In conclusion, regarding the proposed marriage, I must say, frankly, that I imagine the boy will render the final, effective decision, regardless of what anybody thinks. Because I predict that the girl will be more influenced by his utterances than by any other's arguments—for or against. M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Watermelon Good For Salad Bowl

Here is an idea for a novel salad bowl: Cut a watermelon in half lengthwise and scoop out the center. Cut the pulp into balls or cubes. Take a thin slice off the rounded part of the shell, so it won't tip. Notch the edges of the melon case, and at serving time, fill it with fresh fruits and berries mixed with the watermelon cubes. Season lightly with French dressing and tuck lettuce leaves or cress around the edges. It gives a gay summer note to a luncheon buffet table. The guests help themselves. If you have storage space, keep the melon bowl chilled until serving time; that helps cool the salad.

A Woman's New York

—By Alice Hughes

SPOUSE ABOUT TOWN: The Fourth passed quietly here, in a way, but when a small boy blew up and popped a paper bag on East Fifty-third street, seven men and women had strokes. The city is astonishingly panicky, just now, and when a truck backfires, we automatically dive down manholes. Silly, but there it is. A metropolis that is one huge neurosis.

Ona Munson, the little radio and movie actress, was hurled a cocktail party by her film company at the Savoy Plaza the other day, and it yanked back all sorts of memories of these rackets. My specialty having been stage and screen since the Spanish-American War, I've covered hundreds of them, all exactly alike, except for the days when money ran freely in the gutters, and Paramount tossed a brawl for Maurice Chevalier at the local Ritz, which cost $25,000 and lasted three days. . .

Then there's the interview. Sigrid Undset, the Norwegian novelist, is coming over here any day, and it reminds me of my first visit with poor Jean Harlow. It was when she was making personal appearances here with her first film, "Hell's Angels," and I called on her at her hotel. She was just a baby then, but she set a great stage. When her beautiful mother let me in, Harlow was seated on a settee in the living room, and beside her was one of Undset's 10-pound novels, carelessly tossed down open at page 534. I knew the kid hadn't even read page one.

Presses must be stopped as we learn that Norma Shearer has been made honorary colonel of an antiaircraft regiment in Philadelphia. Ah, well, the old salami is always good. I bet you Mary Pickford was honorary colonel of at least 30 regiments in that other little war. As Shakespeare perfectly put it, "Sweet are the uses of publicity."

Mrs. Davies Entertains, Then Starts for Camp

Mr. and Mrs. Wade Ellis Will Leave At End of Month for Motor Trip to New England; Others Plan Vacation Jaunts

LIVING UP TO HER reputation as an energetic person, Mrs. Joseph Davies presided at a lavish luncheon yesterday afternoon and left almost immediately afterward for her camp in the Adirondacks.

Since the Special Assistant to the Secretary of State and Mrs. Joseph Davies leased Valley View Farm—a 25-acre estate on Foxhall road—they have entertained extensively. Yesterday's luncheon attended by officials as well as a sprinkling of diplomats, was in the nature of a farewell—for the summer. Mrs. Davies, who left for her camp by train, was accompanied by her pretty young daughter, Nedenia, who is a student at Mount Vernon Seminary.

Although Mr. Davies will not accompany his wife to her palatial camp, on the Upper St. Regis chain, he will undoubtedly spend part of the summer there. At present the erstwhile Ambassador to the Soviet and Minister to Belgium, is toying with the idea of attending the Democratic convention in Chicago.

Although Washington has been boasting of ideal "summer resort" weather the exodus to cooler climes is on. Mr. and Mrs. Wade Ellis, who were also luncheon hosts yesterday, as they have been for the past few Sundays, will leave the end of the month for a motor trip to New England. The luncheon at Rippon lodge combined a congenial gathering, with excellent food and sparkling conversation.

Stoddards Plan Newport Visit

Mrs. Lothrop Stoddard recently returned from Lake Geneva, Wis., where she spent three weeks as the guest of Mrs. Fernando Cuniberti who has a summer place there. With her children, Mrs. Cuniberti will remain there throughout the summer. Mr. Cuniberti, who is back in Washington, will divide his time between here and their newly acquired farm in Maryland.

Mr. and Mrs. Stoddard will leave next Monday to visit Newport where they will be the guests of Rear Admiral Edward C. Kalbfus, president of the Naval War College there, and Mrs. Kalbfus. Mr. Stoddard will give a lecture at the college. Many parties are being planned in their honor and among the hostesses will be Mrs. James Laurens Van Alen who is ensconsed at the swank resort for the summer.

From Newport the Stoddards will go to West Dennis on Cape Cod where their son and daughter are. The family will remain on the Cape until October. Since the publication of Mr. Stoddard's latest book, "Into the Darkness," a story about Nazi Germany, the material for which was gathered first hand in Europe last winter, the author has been widely sought for lectures. On Saturday Mr. Stoddard was interviewed on the radio here.

Wianno Popular With Capitalites

And still they leave! Mrs. George Rublee, who has had as her guest recently Mrs. Margaret Sanger, will leave this week for her summer place at North Conway, N. H. Mr. and Mrs. Spencer Gordon are already settled at Bass River, N. H.

Wianno—another spot on Cape Cod—comes in for its share of Capitalites. Mrs. Charles Russell is already established at her place on Wianno for the summer. Another Wianno summer settler is Mrs. Gilbert Hitchcock. Mrs. Hitchcock left several weeks ago for her home in Omaha, Nebr.

From there she will go to Chicago to visit friends going from there to Cape Cod, where she plans to remain until October. Mrs. Laurence Vilas, of Chicago, who is well known here, is also established at Wianno for the summer.

Mrs. W. T. Mann To Return Today From Newport, R.I.

Mrs. William T. Mann will return today from Newport, R. I., where she spent last week as the guest of Mrs. Thorndike Phelps, formerly of this city, who now lives in Newport.

Mrs. Phelps, who spent last winter here with her aunt, Mrs. Bell Gurnee, formerly owned the house on Tracy place which now houses the Finnish Legation. During her stay in Newport Mrs. Mann was widely entertained.

Silvers' Estate Scene of Party For Mrs. Tufty

A congenial group gathered at the Sherwood Forest home of Dr. and Mrs. Edwin S. Silver yesterday afternoon for a swimming and luncheon party in honor of Mrs. Harold Tufty, known professionally as Esther von Wagoner Tufty. Mr. and Mrs. Tufty spent the week-end as the guests of the Silvers.

For the most part, guests included members of the Women's National Press Club. While many chose to swim, others remained on the sun-deck to watch. An impromptu bar had been set up, and here many guests chatted over long, cool drinks. Roast turkey and baked ham formed the mainstay of the buffet luncheon, but a favorite with all was the homemade devil's food cake.

Among those who attended the party were Miss Sigrid Arne, Miss Estelle Welsh, Miss Catherine Redmond, Mrs. Ned Brunson Harris, Mrs. John Hager, Mrs. Elizabeth Young, Miss Mary Hornaday, Mrs. H. E. Gasch, Mrs. Helena Hill Weed, Mrs. Mary MacCracken Jones, Miss Hazel Edgar, Miss Christine Sadler, Miss Virginia Price, Miss Virginia Stanley, Miss Babs Lincoln, Miss Patricia O'Malley, Mrs. Alfred B. Williams, Mrs. Dwight G. Howerth, Mrs. Frederick L. Gillet and others.

Maj. Gen. Holcomb And Wife Return From Boat Cruise

Suntanned and rested, Maj. Gen. Thomas Holcomb, Commandant of the Marine Corps, and Mrs. Holcomb returned yesterday from a four-day cruise aboard their ship, Slowboat. They were accompanied on the party by Col. and Mrs. W. P. T. Hill, of Philadelphia.

From now on the Holcombs will have to travel to Coons Creek, at Leonardtown, Md., to board their boat for they left it there for the summer. The Holcombs report they had a delightful trip, "the weather fine" and "no rain on the Fourth." They spent the holiday at Bretons Bay.

Weldon G. Dawsons On Wedding Trip

Mr. and Mrs. Weldon Griffith Dawson, whose marriage took place in the Calvary Methodist Church on June 25, are in New England on their honeymoon. The bride is the former Miss Marguerite Donheim, daughter of Mrs. Mary Donheim. Mr. Dawson is the son of Mr. and Mrs. William Dawson, of Wilmington, Del.

Four rows of candles adorned the altar, and palms and flowers completed the decorations. The Rev. Phillip C. Edwards officiated. Preceding the ceremony, Victor Barnes played several organ numbers. Mrs. Marion Rumbles, jr., was soloist.

Given in marriage by her brother, Carl E. Donheim, the bride wore a gown of white lace with a long train. A coronet held her veil in place. She carried a bouquet of carnations and lilies of the valley. Her ensemble was completed by a pearl necklace, a gift of the bridegroom.

Mrs. George Free, of Mount Airy, served as matron of honor. She wore a pink net outfit. Mrs. Carl E. Donheim and Miss Dorothy Elliott were also attendants. One was gowned in yellow, trimmed with blue, and the other wore blue, trimmed with yellow. They carried matching flowers. Ralph Dawson was best man for his brother. Mr. and Mrs. Garrett Have Several Guests at Estate Near Rectortown

MR. AND MRS. GEORGE A. GARRETT, of Washington, and her daughter, Miss Elaine Darlington, with several guests, spent the week-end at Chilly Bleak, the Garretts' Virginia estate near Rectortown. Miss Darlington, a debutante of the season, who will be presented in five different cities during the season, will spend some time during the fall and winter in the Virginia hunt country. She is an accomplished young horsewoman, is keen about fox-hunting and looks stunning in her riding togs.

The Garrett household spent a restful few days playing tennis, swimming and riding about the lovely countryside. They attended the polo game, played on Phipps Goose Creek Field yesterday afternoon, between Fauquier-Loudoun and a team of the Third Cavalry from Fort Myer. The sidelines were crowded with spectators at the exciting game played for the benefit of the Red Cross.

MR. AND MRS. ROBERT S. PICKENS entertained at a swimming party and supper on Saturday evening at Janelia, their home near Leesburg. The party was given in honor of their cousin and house guest, Miss Mary Anna McBride, of Charlotte, N. C., and Miss Celia Lacy, of Fredericksburg, the niece and house guest of Mr. and Mrs. William Sterling Lacy, of Leesburg. Last night Miss Lacy and Miss McBride were honor guests at a supper party given by Mr. and Mrs. Lacy at their home, Elwood. Guests included members of the younger set of society. Mr. and Mrs. H. First Sunset Concert Draws Social Throng

Cool Evening Brings Out Wraps Aplenty; Clouds Cause Anxiety

Although the weatherman gave the audience a few uneasy moments, the season's first Sunset Symphony, given by the National Symphony Orchestra, went off as scheduled last evening.

Society—at least that part of it that has not deserted the Capital—was well represented. More wraps, than is the custom, were brought last night because the July evening turned unusually cool. "Regular customers" of the symphony last season noticed that the shell, where the orchestra is ensconced, has been moved 30 or 40 feet farther out in the river, giving a much better view to those on the sidelines.

Red Cross Talk By Mrs. Belmont

Mrs. August Belmont, who was the guest of the evening, spoke on the work of the Red Cross—to which this concert was dedicated. Mrs. Belmont, who arrived from New York only a few hours prior to the performance, was accompanied by Mrs. Barton K. Yount, wife of Brig. Gen. Yount, and Mr. and Mrs. Raymond McKay. Mrs. Belmont gave a moving speech immediately after intermission. It was followed by the rendition of "Moldau," by Smetana. A stirring composition, named for a river in Czecho-Slovakia, it carried out Dr. Hans Kindler's plan to have at least one number on the program with some connection with water.

Howes Attend Opening Concert

A gay group of guests arrived with Mr. and Mrs. Walter Bruce Howe, who came down from Newport especially for the opening concert. Glimpsed here and there in the throng were Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Edwin M. Watson, the Assistant Secretary of the Interior and Mrs. Elbert K. Burlew, Senator William H. King, Representative Caroline O'Day, Rear Admiral and Mrs. John H. Towers, Maj. Ernest W. Brown, Representative Jennings Randolph, Dr. Frank W. Ballou, Miss Mary Bourke, Mrs. Florence Kerr, Fleming Newbold, John T. O'Rourke, Marcy L. Sperry, Dr. Harold Spivacke, chief of the music division of the Library of Congress, and Lloyd S. Wilson.

A group of Red Cross officials on hand included James L. Feiser, vice chairman of domestic operations, and Mrs. Feiser; Ernest J. Swift, vice chairman of insular and foreign operations, and Mrs. Swift, and Brig. Gen. F. R. Keefer, chairman of the District Chapter, and Mrs. Keefer.

D. C. Couple On Bridal Trip

The marriage of the former Miss Elaine Ervin (now Mrs. Haworth), daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Ervin, of Middleport and Columbus, Ohio, took place on Saturday afternoon at the home of the bridegroom's mother, Mrs. Thomas W. Haworth, on Thirty-second street. The Rev. A. Lee Laer, pastor the the Presbyterian Church at Morgantown, W. Va., officiated at the 2:30 o'clock ceremony before an improvised altar of madonna lilies, gladioli and laurel.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a white starched chiffon gown made over taffeta, with a bouffant skirt and fitted bodice. The short puffed sleeves were trimmed with bands of lace. She carried gardenias and lilies of the valley.

Miss Clare Ervin, of Columbus, was maid of honor for her sister. She wore a rose petal pink net gown with a sweetheart neck line and a tight girdle of pink satin. She carried a Colonial bouquet of briarcliff roses and delphinium. Ross Haworth was best man for his brother.

The reception took place in the garden for members of the two families and a few intimate friends.

The bride was graduated from the Ohio State University, where she received her master's degree, and is now a teacher at the Woodrow Wilson High School. Dr. Haworth was graduated from George Washington and Johns Hopkins universities and is now professor of science and chairman of the division of science at the Wilson Teachers College.

Mr. and Mrs. Ervin, parents of the bride, and her brother, Thomas Ervin, of New York, came on for the wedding. Others from out of town included, Mr. and Mrs. William S. Brown, of New York; Mrs. Alfred Lee Laer, of Morgantown; Mrs. W. D. Houston and Mrs. Robert T. Weiser, of Zanesville, Ohio.

Mrs. Raphael Turover Hadassah Hostess

Mrs. Raphael Tourover will be hostess at a membership luncheon of the Washington Chapter of Hadassah tomorrow, at her home, 4812 Thirtieth street. This will be "President's Day," since several presidents of the various local woman's organizations are to join the ranks of Hadassah at this luncheon, and will be welcome by the chapter president, Mrs. Moe Offenberg.

Mrs. Tourover, herself a past president of the Washington chapter and a member of the National Board, will address the guests on the Palestinian situation in the present crisis. Mrs. David H. Kushner will give a brief sketch entitled "Riddles in Rhyme." The chairman of the luncheon is Mrs. Robert J. Rothstein, and Mrs. Maurice Eanet, cochairman.

CAPITAL WHIRL

By SALLY SWIFT

THE PROVERBIAL Britisher who refuses to give up the customs of home and dines alone, spotlessly attired in a dinner jacket, while jungle beasts howl around him has his American counterpart in the person of Hugh Millard, first secretary of the United States Legation in Sofia, Bulgaria.

Sofia is not, of course, in the wilds of the tropics but the ancient and honorable sport of golf does seem to be about as foreign to the capital of Bulgaria as the Englishman's dinner-jacket is to his jungle. Mr. Millard is a golfer and was, until recently, a golfer without a golf-course.

After Mrs. Millard and the children returned to America in accordance with the State Department's policy of "bring 'em back alive," Mr. Millard decided that lack of family and lack of golf were not to be borne. So, in order to solace his loneliness, he founded the first and only golf club in Sofia.

He persuaded the shepherds of the largest pasture in the vicinity of the capital to herd all of their sheep into convenient corners during certain hours which he designated as golfing hours. In the non-golfing hours the sheep serve as greenkeepers, nibbling away at the pasturage.

Having made this happy arrangement, Mr. Millard gathered up a few kindred golfing spirits and began a chapter in Bulgarian history which, in future years, will probably be titled, "How the game of Golf Came to Bulgaria."

It seems that the United States Ambassador to Great Britain, Mr. Joseph P. Kennedy, has been very firm about sending home to America all of the ladies of the embassy in London. When it came the turn of pretty Page Huidekoper to leave her secretarial job at the embassy and to be evacuated to her native land she became a bit tearful at the prospect of quitting her post.

BEAUTY IN TEARS had absolutely no effect on Ambassador Kennedy, who informed Page that her tears "would only spoil her make-up and do no good at all." Consequently Page is spending the summer in Boyce, Va., with her mother and making frequent trips to Washington to visit friends, among them Mrs. Edward B. McLean, with whom she dined the other evening.

Charles E. Bohlen, better known as "Chip," has sailed for Europe to his post as second secretary of the American Embassy in Moscow. Mr. Bohlen arrived in America for his vacation accompanied by his pretty, blond wife, but, because of State Department rules, he has departed for Russia without her.

Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Bangs are at Rehoboth Beach, Del. They are staying at Exergreens-by-the-Sea while completing the building and furnishing of their cottage on Henlopen avenue. The new cottage is most attractively located, being near both the beach and the pine woods, and the interior is sure to be quite perfect when finished, as Mrs. Bangs is a keen collector of antique furniture.

Also staying at Evergreens-by-the-Sea and enjoying the nearby beach are Judge and Mrs. van Fossan.

Gen. and Mrs. Charles B. Drake have arrived at Rehoboth to spend the summer. Their daughter, Barrine, who was with them at the seaside last summer, has become so fond of California that she has decided to stay on there most of the summer.

MR. AND MRS. FRANCIS WINSLOW have opened their cottage at Rehoboth for the season. Another member of the family who is spending a seaside vacation is Mr. Winslow's aunt, Miss Elizaeth Patterson.

Also among the cottage colony are Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Walker and Mr. and Mrs. Albert Walker, who have cottages on Columbia avenue.

Dining at the Corner Cupboard the other night were a number of Washingtonians, among them Dr. and Mrs. Gregg Birdsall, Col. and Mrs. Hallett and Jack Chase with his son, Homer.

D. C. Authoress To Take Cruise

With a book, "Foundation Stone," scheduled to come off the presses shortly, Lella Warren (Mrs. Gerald Breckenridge), who has been visiting her mother, Mrs. B. S. Warren, here, will leave soon for a vacation cruise.

Her latest book, to be published by Alfred A. Knopf on September 9, is a story of the experiences of the Warrens, the Lawsons and the Underwoods who left the Carolinas on a pioneering trek.

Although she was born in Alabama, the Author spent a roving life with her father, who was Assistant Surgeon General of the United States Public Health Service. In 1912 the family settled in Washington and Miss Warren attended Goucher and later George Washington University.

"Foundation Stone" will be the first of a triology. The writer plans to do the next book on the public health service—in which a number of contemporaries of her father will appear. She has a 17-year-old daughter, Mrs. Lee Warren Spanogle, who is already planning to take a course in architecture at Cornell.

Miss Warren, whose book incidentally, will be brought out in a limited autographed edition by Knopf in their "Friends of the Borzai" series, plans to do a short modern novel this summer. In the fall she will go on a brief lecture tour before starting on the second book of the Triology.

The Warrens are well known to Washington society. The author is the niece of the late Bates Warren. One of her several brothers is associated with the management of the Kennedy-Warren.

Miss Garland Is July Bride

Col. and Mrs. Oswald Wilson McNeese announce the marriage of their daughter, Marie Garland, to Fred Ruthven Youngblood, jr.

The ceremony was performed July 5 by Dr. John Cartwright, in the rectory of the Church of The Immaculate Conception, and was attended by the immediate families of the bride and bridegroom.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, Col. McNeese, had as her only attendant her sister, Miss Susan McNeese. The bridegroom's brother, John Youngblood, of Waycross, Ga., was best man.

The bride was graduated from George Washington University and before coming to Washington attended Louise McLehee's School in New Orelans. She is a member of the Kappa Kappa Gamma Fraternity, Phi Beta Kappa, the Mortar Board and other honorary fraternities. Mr. Youngblood is a member of Sigma Chi Fraternity.

Mrs. Youngblood's maternal ancestors in the Garland and Dupre families have been prominent in Louisiana for many generations and her paternal grandfather, John McNeese, was a pioneer educator in that State.

Mr. Youngblood, a native of Georgia, is connected with the Department of Justice.

Among the out-of-town guests at the wedding were: Miss Belle Dupre, of Louisiana, an aunt, and Mr. and Mrs. John Youngblood, of Waycross, Ga., where the bridegroom's family has long been prominent in political and social circles.

Pacing Army's No. 1 Honor Post

By George Thorpe

MARCHING now in Arlington Cemetery is a soldier who holds the No. 1 honor post of the United States Army.

Twenty-four hours a day, 365 days a year, a sentry paces there, the guardian of a fellow doughboy, now nameless, who fell 22 years ago.

His face immobile, a rifle with fixed bayonet on his shoulder, he strides 31 measured steps before the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier, wheels and stands motionless for 5 seconds, then paces back once more.

Visitors to the cemetery eye him curiously, and wonder how long he must walk there on this detail that never ends.

If they asked him he wouldn't answer. He is allowed to speak to no one, marches with eyes fixed straight ahead.

Two soldiers from Company K, Twelfth Infantry, of Arlington Cantonment, answered some of the questions the visitors might have asked. They were First Class Privates Lloyd F. Green and Private William Helfrich. They stood near the Tomb, waiting their turns to relieve Private Francis Yates.

"We have 12-hour shifts," Green explained, "two hours marching and four hours off . . . then we start marching again."

Hot? "Sure it's hot—tell me it was 92 today when I was out there. You get pretty thirsty, too," answered Helfrich. "When we changed guard an hour ago, my throat was so parched I could only whisper to the corporal."

Cold, and wet in winter? "Sure, it's cold and wet. When it snows or rains you can stand under the canopy of that booth there, according to regulations, but I've never seen anyone under it yet. Soldiers get used to things like that," Green said.

"Yes, that's one of the new Garands; weighs a little over 9 pounds, the bayonet another 6 ounces."

Our duties? "To prevent desecration or disrespect to the Tomb," was the simple answer.

Yes, but . . . "If anyone tries to get inside that chain, well . . . we're here to stop him, that's all."

And what do they think about as they march? "A thousand things. You get plenty of time to think on this man's detail!"

"Boy, would a cold drink go good now . . . wonder what my next detail will be after the shift next month . . . overseas? . . . maybe 20 years from now some soldier will be walking up and down in front of me."

Youth Parley Rejects Slap At Dictators

Objectors Oppose Inclusion of Russia In Condemnation

By the Associated Press

Lake Geneva, Wis., July 7.—The American Youth Congress in final session today squelched a proposal to condemn "political dictatorship" in Russia.

The proposal was contained in a resolution by Franklin Kramer, Elgin, Ill., chairman of the University of Wisconsin All-Campus Peace Federation, which read:

"Because dictatorship means the loss of civil liberties we are determined that our Government shall never be led by a war dictator as are England and France, or a political dictator as are Germany, Italy, Japan, Russia and Franco-Spain. Therefore be it resolved that this Congress go on record condemning all dictatorship."

Kramer was the only speaker in favor of his resolution. Opposing speakers dwelt almost entirely on their objections to inclusion of Russia in the condemnation. Carl Ross, national secretary of the Young Communists League, said Russia "is a democracy."

Kramer's resolution was voted down overwhelmingly, with only eight or ten hands raised for it.

The congress then passed, unanimously, a reaffirmation of last year's stand on dictatorship which stated devotion to true democracy and "opposition to all forms of dictatorship regardless of whether Communist, Fascist, Nazi or any other type."

It was the charge of "Communist control" that prompted some 60 "pro-Americans," backed by the former heavyweight boxing champion, Gene Tunney, to break with the A. Y. C. and take first steps toward establishment of a new patriotic youth movement.

The "pro-Americans," who had announced intentions of "ridding" the A. Y. C. of Communist control, were refused seats as delegates on the grounds their credentials were not properly field.

A report adopted last night "condemned the present drive against the civil liberties of Communists" through "persecution of its leaders on passport technicalities" and through challenges to placing Communists on the ballot. It also opposed denial of WPA and NYA jobs to Communists, Nazis and aliens.

The same report condemned "nation-wide attacks upon religious minorities," opposed registration and fingerprinting of aliens and added:

"We condemn as also furthering the war hysteria the discrimination which is now developing against all national minorities under the guise of fighting the 'fifth column.'"

Capital Chinese Mark Three-Year Stand Against Japan

Chinese Mark War's 3d Year

With drumbeats and marching feet, waving flags and speeches of praise, Washington Chinese yesterday hailed their homeland's three-year stand against Japan.

Headed by a Metropolitan Police escort, 400 men, women and children tramped from Chinatown to the Pythian Temple, 1012 Ninth street northwest, where Lieut. Chiang Wego, son of Generalissimo and Mme. Chiang Kai-shek; Counselor Liu Chieh, of the Chinese Embassy, and others asked continued moral and material aid to China.

Stepping behind the American and Chinese color bearers were the khaki-uniformed and trench-capped members of the Chinese Youth Club, accompanied by their drum and bugle corps; representatives of the Chinese National Salvation Association; children of the Chinese Community Church language school, other Chinese citizens, and some Americans.

"Best Defense in Pacific"

Borne in the procession were banners with such inscriptions as:

"A Freed China is United States' Best Defense in Pacific," and "Boycott Japanese Silk."

Standing on the flag-flanked rostrum near a picture of Dr. Sun Yat-Sen, "George Washington" of the Chinese Republic, Counselor Chieh said the Chinese were the only people ever capable of formulating and operating a Monroe Doctrine in the Orient.

Stating that China's struggle was interwoven with the destinies of other democracies, the diplomat pointed out that it was fighting not only for national existence, but also for the justice, peace and freedom of all humanity.

Contrasting China's resistance with the quick capitulation of some European countries to Germany, he declared that China had the man power, determination and equipment to resist for three more years, "if necessary."

Speaking in Mandarin, Lieut. Chiang Wego, recent graduate of the United States Air Corps School at Maxwell Field, lauded the devotion and sacrifice of China's war victims, to whom a tribute of silence was paid later.

Interviewed after the meeting, the 25-year-old officer expressed a desire to return to China as soon as possible. A graduate of Sochow University, he spent from 1937 to 1939 in the Bavarian Mountaineer Corps before beginning his pilot training course in America.

Telegram From Chiangs

Earlier, Dr. C. C. Hung, pastor of the Chinese Community Church, and meeting chairman, read a telegram from Generalissimo and Mme. Chiang Kai-shek, in which they acknowledged support of the Chinese by friends in America and elsewhere. Because of them, they wrote, the morale and strength of the troops are higher than ever.

"It is indeed regrettable," they said, "that world statesmen did not realizez at outset that Japanese invasion of Manchuria . . . if remained unchecked, would have distastrous consequences in every part of the world."

Others who spoke included Henry H. Douglas, member of the American Committee for Nonparticipation in Aggression and the Washington Committee for Aid to China. Also on the platform were Col. T. C. Kuo, military attache; Capt and Mme. T. Yen, of the Chinese Embassy.

Mechanical Mix-up Disappoints Firemen

Tappahannock, Va., July 7 (AP).—Members of the volunteer fire department dropped knives and forks as a wailing siren rent the noonday calm. From their luncheon tables, to a man they came, and in short order had reached the fire station and had the engine wheeled out on Prince street. Still the siren shouted.

The volunteers were hard put to find the blaze that wasn't there until a State patrolman came up and admitted somewhat sheepishly:

"The siren on my car seems to be stuck."

EXTRA SKILL AND EXTRA DARING MADE
CLINTON FERGUSON AMERICA'S NO.1 OUTBOARD CHAMPION

BOMBSHELL! That's his name for it. A splinter of mahogany, a bit of fabric . . . why, it's nothing but a shell with a motor. But when Clinton Ferguson clamps down the throttle of that motor, you've got the fastest combination in outboarding today. Speed? More than that. Speed plus—plus one man's uncanny ability to wheedle and squeeze just a few extra miles per hour out of four cylinders and a propeller. Yes, it's the extras that win—even in cigarettes.

LEAN, WIRY, 135 pounds of nerve and driving skill. Hunched in that tiny pit—one hand on the wheel, the other on the throttle—he roars across the surface in a frothing skid against time. Half in, half out of the water, Clinton Ferguson never lets up. Turns? He takes them wide open ...throws himself around...with a daring equaled only by the extra skill of his steering hand. Boats, drivers—cigarettes—it's the extras that set them apart... like the extra mildness of Camels.
THE "EXTRAS" IN CAMELS MADE THEM HIS CIGARETTE

THOSE EXTRAS IN SLOWER-BURNING CAMELS SURE CLICK WITH ME
THE "EXTRAS" of costlier, slower-burning tobaccos have made Camels the No. 1 cigarette in the field. And the explanation of these extras in Camels is just as scientific as it is logical. Too-fast burning in a cigarette creates excess heat. Excess heat ruins the delicate elements of mildness and flavor. Slower burning preserves flavor and aroma...naturally gives a cooler smoke. Camels, with their costlier tobaccos, give you extras that you won't find in any other cigarette—even a slower way of burning that means extra smoking per pack (see panel at right).
EXTRA MILDNESS
EXTRA COOLNESS
EXTRA FLAVOR
In recent laboratory tests, Camels burned 25% slower than the average of the 15 other of the largest-selling brands tested—slower than any of them. That means, on the average, a smoking plus equal to

Suburbs Lure City People, Figures Show

Census Indicates Trend Toward Rural Life; Area Near D.C. Gains 61.6%

Last decade saw an exodus of city dwellers to the suburbs, where there's a garden to dig and a lawn to mow, census officials observed yesterday.

While the trend was more strikingly evident in 1940 census figures of other large cities, the 10-year growth of Washington and adjacent territory provides a good illustration, said Gerald Ryan, assistant to the director of the census.

The contiguous counties and Alexandria, he pointed out, gained an even larger percentage of residents than did Washington, which itself set a record among major cities so far reported.

The total population of Alexandria and the counties of Arlington and Fairfax, Va., and Montgomery and Prince Georges, Md., increased from 185,329 in 1930 to 299,589 in 1940—a gain of 61.6 per cent as compared with the District's 36.2 per cent growth from a city of 486,869 residents to one of 663,153.

Of other large cities so far reported in the census, some have decreased in population and none except Washington has shown an increase greater than Baltimore's 8 per cent, a figure which looks insignificent besides Washington's 36 per cent gain.

"Yet the outskirts of these cities," said Mr. Ryan, "have increased in population in practically every instance." He described the trend as a "flattening out" of the population of cities which, unlike Washington, received little or no stimulus for growth during the decade.

The "flattening out" of some of the Nation's largest cities, he indicated, is reflected in these 1940 census figures:

New York City, 7,380,259, gain of 6 per cent; Chicago, 3,384,556, gain of one-fourth of 1 per cent; Philadelphia, 1,935,086, loss of three-fourths of 1 per cent; Detroit, 1,618,549, gain of 3 per cent.

Cleveland, 874,305, loss of 3 per cent; Baltimore, 854,144, gain of 8 per cent; St. Louis, 813,748, loss of 1 per cent; Pittsburgh, 665,384, loss of 1 per cent; Milwaukee, 589,558, gain of 2 per cent; Buffalo, 575,150, gain of one-half of 1 per cent.

I.O.O.F. Creed Seen as Means Of Ending Wars

Lodge Head Speaks At Unknown Soldier's Tomb Ceremonies

Application of the principles of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows—"friendship, love and truth, faith, hope and charity"—was advocated to end all wars as several thousand Odd Fellows and others paid homage to the Unknown Soldier yesterday at Arlington.

Judge George S. Starrett, of Columbia, Mo., grand sire of the order, told his audience that a nation conquered by arms would rise again to strike at its conqueror but one conquered by the principles of Odd Fellowship would live in peace with the world.

The Tomb of the Unknown Soldier was covered with wreaths by various units of Odd Fellows and Rebekahs, participants in the seventh annual pilgrimage to the tomb. The order's highest honor, the grand decoration of chivalry, was bestowed upon the nameless soldier. The diamond and ruby medal will be placed in the Hall of Trophies at Arlington.

Preceding the services, uniformed Odd Fellows and Rebekahs, led by massed colors and a brass band, marched from Fort Myer gate to the Arlington Amphitheater.

Power Rate Cut Hearing Sought In Prince Georges

Public hearing on the question of reduction of electric rates charged by the Consolidated Gas & Electric Co. has been asked of the Maryland Public Service Commission by John Riggles, president of the Seabrook (Md.) Citizens Association.

In a letter to the commission he suggests that county residents should have the present 6½-cent per kilowatt hour rate reduced to 5 cents. Riggles asserted that the Safe Harbor Water & Power Co., which produces power for the Maryland company, sell power to the Potomac Electric Power Co., in Washington for rates which permit a rate as low as 1 cent per k. w. h. in some instances.

Riggles also urged that a holding company law be enacted for the benefit of the millions of electric light users of the United States.

Baptists Dedicate New Quarters At Brookmont

An optimistic outlook for church work in the Brookmont (Md.) section was pictured yesterday by Dr. Edward Hughes Pruden, president of the Washington Federation of Churches, in addressing formal opening services of the Brookmont Baptist Church Building.

Dr. Pruden declared that rural churches are making a real contribution to religion.

John Ruthven, executive secretary of the First Baptist Church, "mother" church of the Brookmont congregation, brought greetings to the congregation. The services were held in a dwelling on Ridge drive, which has been converted into a temporary church. A permanent church edifice will be later erected. The Rev. Marion W. Royall, Brookmont pastor, presided.

13,500 Fill Watergate for Concert Dedicated to the Red Cross

OPENING CONCERT—More than 13,000 Washingtonians who like their music outdoors gathered at the Watergate last night for the opening of the Sunset Symphony season. Washington's summer enchantment of river, rare sunset and symphony music returned last night with an overtone of war.

Park police estimated there 13,500 persons in the crowd that filled the Potomac Watergate and flowed into long lines on Memorial Bridge and Waterside drive to hear the National Symphony Orchestra in the first of the 1940 Sunset Symphonies.

An idyl of music in a cooling night with still flowing water, a lavish sunset and a golden sliver of a moon provided, however, only partial forgetfulness of events in Europe.

The concert was dedicated to the "heroic work of the American Red Cross" and its intermission was turned over to the mercy organization to appeal for aid for war sufferers.

Mrs. Belmont Speaks

While a group of young women of the District Chapter in the uniforms of the Red Cross volunteer services stood on either side of the podium, Dr. Hans Kindler, the conductor, escorted across the concert barge Mrs. August Belmont, of New York, a member of the Red Cross central committee.

She thanked the chapter for exceeding its doubled war relief campaign quota, but urged those who could afford it to give more and those who couldn't to "go out and preach the gospel of the Red Cross."

The Red Cross, she reminded, is "the first in disasters—those brought about by nature and those horribly cruel ones brought by war."

"What is happening here," she added, "is just a symbol of what is happening throughout the country . . . These young women are but a symbol of the 40,000,000 men and women throughout the world who served under the Red Cross flag."

A full hour before concert time at least half the Watergate seats were taken and the parade of scores of canoeists from up river boathouses was well under way. Some of the crowd had the foresight to bring pillows or blankets for reclining on the river bank, but for those whose seat stubs put them on the Watergate steps, the management provided quilted pads.

Dr. Kindler came about 7:30 p. m. while Fred Bayhi, sound engineer, was making a last-minute check of the new amplifying system with its five concert microphones. The doctor, in his white dinner jacket, stopped to caution a member of the symphony's business staff against describing a future concert as dedicated to the nations "conquered" in World War II.

"It should be 'invaded' countries," he said. "Norway is not conquered, Denmark is not conquered."

Canoeists Rise for Anthem

At 8:02 p. m. a gong on the barge was rung, the crowd grew silent, fully 100 canoeists stowed away paddles, the harbor policeman in a rowboat leaned on his oars and Dr. Kindler made his entrance, bowing and waving.

When the crowd arose with the first notes of the Star-Spangled Banner, two canoeists, scorning safety for patriotism, stood up also.

At 8:04 p. m. the moon began to show in the clearing sky. At 10:15 p. m. the orchestra played its fourth encore.

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Hans Kindler conducts the National Symphony Orchestra Sunday night in the first summer concert of 1940 at the Potomac Watergate. Program: Overture to "Ruslan and Liudmila" (Glinka), Symphony No. 2 in D major (Sibelius), "Vltava" (Smetana), Two Waltzes (Brahms), Berceuse and Finale from "Zhar Ptitza" (Stravinski), Polka from "The Golden Age" (Shostakovich), Introduction, Coronation Scene and Garden Scene from "Boris Godunov" (Musorgski).

For the thousands of auditors who assembled at the Potomac Watergate last evening to welcome the resumption of summer concerts, Hans Kindler provided a program that illustrated the international comity of music and its power to transcend political disagreements. European dissensions and the boundaries between peoples were disregarded in an artistic fellowship that brought together Russian and Finnish, German and Czech composers. Whether or not Dr. Kindler intended it that way (and one strongly surmises that he did), it was an object lesson in the function of music as a promoter of universal brotherhood.

BROWN

Nationalism in music means nothing more than the folk idioms that each people contribute, and it was this aspect of nationalism that was emphasized in the concert. The program first honored Mikhail Ivanovich Glinka, who by his choice of Russian themes for his operas became the founder of a national school. The overture to "Ruslan and Liudmila" has gone around the world to the delight of uncounted listeners who have never heard the opera itself and probably never will. One does not need to know anything about the wonderful adventures of Ruslan in rescuing the fair Liudmila from the wicked wizard, Chernomor, in order to enjoy the infectious gayety of the music and to savor the Slavic quality of the melodies.

Just as Glinka drew upon the legends of Russia for dramatic material, so has Jan Sibelius in our day gone back to the epic tales of Finland as a basis for many of his tone-poems. In his symphonies, however, he delves more deeply into the race consciousness of his people and sublimates emotional traits into abstract music. His popular second symphony, which Dr. Kindler and his players read with a splendid fervor, presents a more distinctive Finnish profile than any of the others because it more frankly uses themes recognizably local.

Sibelius composed most of this symphony in Italy, and that may account for the radiant character of certain passages that seem like bursts of sunlight through brooding mists. The general tone of the symphony is thoughtful, and its effect is that of a prolonged meditation which is now vehement with protest and now lyrical with memories of beauty.

Of the six poems constituting Smetana's "My Country," Dr. Kindler chose the one that is best known and most frequently performed under its German title of "Die Moldau." In respect for the composer's patriotic purpose, there is no reason why we should not call the river that he celebrated by its good Czech name of Vltava. The appropriateness of this water-music to the site of the concert was obvious to every listener.

From Bohemia the musical scene shifted to Germany with two of the delightful waltzes of Johannes Brahms, and then returned to Russia with the Berceuse and Finale from Stravinski's ballet suite, "Zhar Ptitza," and the Polka from Shostakovich's ballet, "The Golden Age." The impudent and amusing Polka brought from the auditors laughter and so much applause that Dr. Kindler repeated it. For the last number he presented his excellent arrangement of excerpts from Musorgski's "Boris Godunov."

To say "final" is to use figurative speech, for the concert did not end there by any means. Watergate audiences are never satisfied with the formal program, and last night the crowd manifested in no uncertain way the desire for more

Schoolgirl Burned When Sparkler Sets Fire to Dress

A pretty, 14-year-old schoolgirl, Mary Gavin, of 6 Quincy place northeast, was burned seriously last night when her dress was ignited by a blazing "sparkler," left over from the Fourth.

MARY GAVIN

Rushed to Sibley Hospital by a neighbor, Miss Caroline Cuticchia, of 4 Quincy place northeast, the girl was treated for third degree burns.

The blonde, blue-eyed schoolgirl, an eighth grade pupil at St. Martin's School, was lighting the sparklers on the low, stone front porch of her home for the amusement of her 6-year-old brother, William, and four of his friends.

When one sparkler slipped and ignited her dress, William ran to the sidewalk, crying, "My sister's on fire! My sister's on fire!"

Louis Ricci, of 26 New York avenue, who was visiting next door, and Anthony Rubino, of 8 Quincy place, carried the girl into her home and wrapped her in blankets. Ricci, a bricklayer, was burned on the right hand.

Washington Players Bow to Philadelphia Team by 3 Points

By Marian H. Barre
The Post's Bridge Editor.

Annapolis, Md.—The Washington team of four was nosed out by the Philadelphia team by three points last night in the Carvel Hall Annapolis Bridge Tournament, leaving the Capital players with only one championship of the five they held at the opening of the annual tournament, held here under the auspices of the American Contract Bridge League.

Charles Solomon, Mrs. B. N. Golder, Stanley Finkel, and S. Becker captured 33½ matches to defeat the Washington foursome of Dr. and Mrs. A. J. Steisberg, Louis Newman and Oscar Brotman who won 30½ matches.

In an action unprecedented in championship bridge circles Lester Mayer and Sam Wessel, of Philadelphia, won the open pair championship over Charles Goren and Byron Kaufman, of Philadelphia, 215½ match points to 209.4 match points, after the Mayer team were eliminated in the opening round. They were allowed to participate in the finals only after another scheduled team failed to play.

The women's championship won Thursday by Mrs. Mary Goldstein and Miss Thelma Goldstein was the only championship retained by Washingtonians. Lost were the men's, mixed, open and team of four championships.

Capital News in Brief

Taken for a ride in his own car William G. Sheridan, of 1624 Thirty-third street northwest, reported to police yesterday that he was ropped of $12 and left to walk back home from Meadows, Md.

Sheridan said two white men spoke to him as he was about to drive away from Twelfth and New York avenue northwest. When he agreed to take them to an address in southwest Washington, one drew a gun, according to Sheridan, and ordered him to keep on driving to Meadows, where he was forced out of the car.

Joke: Man Overboard In the Potomac

John Manthos, 20, of 423 Second street northwest, is a man who puts all he's got into playing a joke and playing it right.

Early yesterday, Manthos leaped from the excusion steamer Potomac just above the Navy Research Laboratory and swam ashore while the boat stopped to search for him. At home later, he explained he had been told a couple of friends would be waiting at the dock with a couple of guffaws at his expense.

"I fooled them,' he said last night.

Policeman, Off Duty, Nabs Purse Thief

Private O. P. Fuss, of Seventh Precinct station, was off duty yesterday, but took time out to nab a fleeing purse snatcher.

Fuss went to the station to check on a case when he heard a police radio lookout for a snatcher who had taken a purse containing $12 from Oleta Bernett, 1637 Thirty-first street northwest, at Thirty-first and Q.

The policeman figured the thief would attempt to escape through Rock Creek Park, so he drove to the P street entrance to Rock Creek drive and waited. Sure enough, the 20-year-old suspect came along a few minutes later. The victim identified the suspect.

He Was a Gentleman And He Was So Nice

A "gentleman" who offered to move a young lady's automobile early yesterday which had been involved in a slight accident, turned out to be not so gallant when it was found that he had also removed the young lady's pocketbook from the front seat.

Miss Louise Holms, 25, of 3601 Thirteenth street northwest, told police her car collided with another at Thirteenth and Park road northwest.

When she got out of her car to investigate, a neatly dressed young man wearing a thin mustache, she said, offered to move her car to the curb. On returning to the car after thanking the young man Miss Holms found her pocketbook and $17 missing.

Former Envoy Is Burglar Victim

Ralph J. Totten, former United States Minister to South Africa, reported to police yesterday that he was the victim of a housebreaking which cost him $120.

Totten told police his first floor apartment at 2800 Ontario road northwest apparently was entered through a rear window. His wallet, containing registration cards, personal papers and the money, was missing.

Checks Bag, Gets Lost And Tells Police All

An absent-minded former soldier appealed to police yesterday to help him locate the rooming house where he checked his suitcase.

Cusick said he arrived in town last Wednesday from Norfolk, Va., checked his suitcase in a rooming house "somewhere on Seventh street northwest," then hurried out to see the sights.

Cusick said he's been looking for the house ever since.

Hundreds Go To Outdoor Religious Rites

Services, Meetings Held on Church Lawns And in Various Parks

Summer outdoor religious programs, reaching their peak yesterday, drew hundreds of worshipers to city parks, church lawns nad nearby mountain rides.

The Central Y. M. C. A. and the Inter-Church Council launched their thirty-third season of Lincoln Park services; the Washington Catholic Evidence Guild continued its meetings in Franklin and Public Library parks, and Chevy Chase Protestant congregations worshiped on the lawn of All Saints' Episcopal Church, Chevy Chase circle.

Senior and young people's leagues of Luther Place Church drove to Sugar Loaf Mountain, where Warren Feldman conducted a service after supper. The Epworth Leagues of Hamline and Brightwood Methodist churches held their meetings in Rock Creek Park.

Addressing the guild meeting in Franklin Park, Mrs. Frank O'Hara, chairman, said that, while many are saying that Christianity has failed today, "there is no logic in saying that a thing has failed until it has been tried."

"Where Christianity really prevails there is success," said she, "for there, among the other virtuous bonds that make for real freedom, is the proper subordination of the ego, the fruits of which are charity, joy, peace, patience and the other happy results that flow from the indwelling of men in the spirit of God." Miss Madeline Kane conducted the afternoon meeting in Public Library Park.

The Berean Bible Class of Ninth Street Christian Church was in charge of the Lincoln Park services, attended by people of several Protestant denominations. Dr. Clifford H. Jope, pastor of the Ninth Street Church, was principal speaker and William R. Schmucker, song leader. The Rev. J. Luther Neff, pastor of Wesley Methodist Church, spoke the Chevy Chase services.

Dr. Harris Hits U. S. War Aid to Japan

Pastor Calls For Drive to Put Scrap Iron on Embargo List

Shipment of war materials from America to Japan was denounced yesterday by Dr. Frederick Brown Harris, pastor of Foundry Methodist Church.

Delivering a sermon recalling today's local Chinese celebration of the third year of resistance against Japanese aggression, Dr. Harris, member of the Washington Committee for Aid to China, asked:

"Why is democratic America supplying Japan with millions of tons of scrap iron and steel used by Japan in murdering and maiming millions of innocent Chinese?

"How can America talk so plously about the preservation of democracy as she looks across the Atlantic, while at the same time millions of tons of junk are piled across this land of the free and the home of the brave, junk sold for 'Judas' dollars to Japan to help her slaughter and enslave China."

"Millions of true Americans ought to let the President know in no uncertain terms that they demand, because ethical decency demands, that scrap iron be placed on the embargo list," continued Dr. Harris, insisting that "not one piece should be sold to international bandits to be used by them in their nefarious schemes of plunder."

The sermon was Dr. Harris' last until September, as he is to leave in two weeks for a vacation at Cape May, New Jersey.

Occupying the pulpit of St. Thomas' Episcopal Church, worshipplace of President Roosevelt, yesterday morning, the Rev. Walter W. Gale, assistant rector, said:

"Too often we quiet our consciences by giving freely of our money—feeling we have done our duty, but fail to identify our money gifts with ourselves.

"Each dollar earned represents so much of our talent and ability spent in doing some definite piece of work, whether it be manual labor or one's duty faithfully performed in some profession—in short, so much of ourselves.

"Likewise, each dollar given to God should be interpreted as being an offering to Him of our self, ability and achievement."

Fairfax School Attendance Up 1,200 in 5 Years

The number of school-age children in Fairfax County increased more than 1,200 in the past five years, J. B. Armfield, jr., clerk to the school board, revealed yesterday in his report.

The latest figures show 8,603 children between 7 and 19. There were 7,371 children of school age, according to the 1935 census. The 1940 increase is larger than for any previous 5-year period. Between 1930 and 1935, the school population jumped only 250.

This census also showed there are 7,366 white children and 1,237 colored children; 7,221 children attend public schools and 999 private schools. Mentally and physically handicapped children unable to attend school number 167.

Views of the News:

THE LEADING HITTER—In the American League it's Taft Wright this week and there is no disposition to laugh him off as a threat to win the batting championship. The little round man with the short arms will never qualify as any sculptor's idea of a batting champ, but the league's pitchers don't underrate him.

POVICH

At first glance it would seem that the Nats were bilked on the deal which sent Wright to the White Sox last winter in exchange for Gerald Walker, what with Walker hitting a mere .309 in contrast to Wright's .360. But balancing the deal is the runs-batted-in figure of Walker, who has banged 53 runs across the plate in contrast to Wright's 40.

One of the secrets of Wright's batting average is too painfully obvious to the opposition. He's the problem child of both infielders and outfielders with his uncanny ability to hit to all fields. They can't shade him. He's not a power hitter, except when they play him too close and then he's apt to make 'em rue it. He's one of those guys of whom they say "he can hit in the dark," meaning he's got a swell batting eye. He gets a piece of that ball with some part of his bat and thus he gets his share of humpty-dumpty hits.

He came into the big league with Washington and he came in dirt cheap. When Bucky Harris was managing the Red Sox they stopped off in Atlanta for an exhibition game and Harris took a fancy to Wright. Two years later when Harris was managing the Nats, Joe Cambria, who then owned Albany, asked Harris' opinion on a deal. The Atlanta club was offering him Wright and $5,000 for Outfielder Dave Harris, Cambria related. "Make that deal or I'll slap you," said Harris. "Wright is a better ballplayer than Dave Harris and you'd be stealing the $5,000." Thus it was that Wright came into the Nats' farm system.

INDIANS 7-5 TO WIN PENNANT—Those are the latest odds quoted by Jack Doyle, of Broadway, but the interesting angle is that the Yankees are rated as his second choice at 9 to 5, despite the fact that they are seven games out of the lead.

The team that Doyle seems to be holding in some contempt is the Detroit Tigers. The Detroit club is in a virtual tie with the Indians, seven games ahead of the Yanks, yet he quotes them at 2½ to 1. The third-place Red Sox are 2½ to 1.

Doyle's inference is plain enough. He thinks the Cleveland pitching can carry the club to the pennant. He must. The Indians are only fifth in team batting. Around the league, especially among rival managers, Doyle's odds on the Indians is creating surprise. Every manager outside of Cleveland is labeling the Tigers as a better-balanced club than the Indians, and a better bet to win if it develops into a stretch struggle.

The 9-to-5 odds are something of a tribute to the Yanks, who are last in club batting, and, as we were saying, seven games out of the lead. Doyle recognizes the latent power there. It seems that he recognizes also that the Red Sox, with their dubious pitching, haven't much chance to get into any world series this year.

LEIBER OUT OF ALL-STAR GAME—And apparently without much regret. He has advised Manager Bill McKechnie that he has a sore throat and would be unable to do the club any good. His retirement is entirely voluntary. The supposed honor of being a member of the All-Star team apparently did not have much attraction for him.

That's been one of the troubles about the All-Star game in recent years. The players are not keen for it. Charley Gehringer did not conceal his delight last season when he wasn't named on the squad. It meant three days of fishing for him. Other players have been muttering at their luck in being chosen to play, envying their less illustrious teammates who would get a three-day vacation from baseball.

When the game is played tomorrow at St. Louis, there won't be a dozen big leaguers in the stands to watch it. Of the 350 big league ballplayers, only a handful attend world series in the fall, aside from the players who are in it. The admission price is an item, of course, but the blunt fact is that precious few baseball players are baseball fans.

Tigers Credited With 10th Victory in 12 Games With St. Louis; Benton Checks Rally

By the Associated Press

Detroit, July 7.—The Detroit Tigers wrested the American League lead from the Cleveland Indians for the second time this season today when they conquered the St. Louis Browns, their favorite opponents, 5 to 2, while the Tribesmen were falling before the Chicago White Sox.

The victory, tenth for Detroit in 12 games with St. Louis was the forty-fourth of the year against 27 defeats for the Tigers, who now have a percentage of .620. Cleveland is 12 points back with 45 wins and 29 losses.

Lynwood Rowe held the Browns to five hits in gaining his sixth victory of the year. He has lost only one game in his successful comeback. Rowe was lifted in the ninth when Roy Cullenbine hit a homer and Chet Laabs doubled, Alton Benton coming in to check the rally.

The Tigers took advantage of every opportunity, scoring twice off Bob Harris in the first inning on a walk to Charley Gehringer, singles by Hank Greenberg and Rudy York and a double by Ervin (Pete) Fox.

In the third the Tigers picked up two more tallies on singles by Gehringer and Fox and two St. Louis misplays.

Grove Wins First Game On 7-Hitter

Dutch Leonard Loses; Monteagudo Star In Nightcap as 5 Errors Aid Him

By Shirley Povich.

With the kind cooperation of the Red Sox, the Nats broke a three-game losing streak late yesterday afternoon. They won a ball game, 7 to 4, by grace of five Boston errors. Earlier in the afternoon the Nats had no such success. They lost the first game of a double bill, 7 to 1.

The double-header, which brought 19,000 fans to Griffith Stadium, virtually added up to an exchange of gifts. Dutch Leonard was the loser in the first game when a cluster of four unearned Boston runs crossed the plate, in the third inning, although Lefty Grove's seven-hit pitching was no drawback to the Red Sox.

Little Rene Monteagudo lifted the Nats out of their losing streak in the second game with some tolerable pitching and the help of those five luscious Boston errors. He also delighted the fans with a screaming triple to the centerfield corner and a long two-bagger high off the right-field wall in a display of hitherto unknown batting power.

Paradoxically, the Nats were outhit, 11 to 8, in that second game, in which Manager Joe Cronin unveiled one Alex Mustaikis, a gangling right-hander late of Scranton, who was making his maiden start in the majors. As long as he was pitching to batters, Mustaikis was doing well enough, but when he started pitching to the bases he was no help to the Red Sox.

Bull Pen Alert

In that second game, Mustaikus aroused the Boston bull-pen to warm-up action early in the first inning when he walked the first two batters to face him, and the Nats came up with three runs in the inning, with the help of a pair of errors. Gerry Walker drove in a run with a single to center and romped to second when Catcher Joe Glenn muffed the throw to the plate. Bonura innocently precipitated the next two runs. He grounded to Jim Tabor who promptly threw the ball into the first base boxes.

By the end of the fourth, the Red Sox banged themselves into a 3-3 tie. They knocked Monteagudo loose from two runs in the third when Finney singled and Foxx and Williams bounced two-baggers off the rightfield wall. Monteagudo's three-base gallop back in the second inning apparently was showing its effects. In the third, Joe Cronin singled, stole second and third in a burst of ambition, and scored when Mustaikis, himself, doubled to deep left.

Without much warning, the Nats broke the tie in the fifth with a pair of unearned runs. Case walked with one out, but Rookie Mustaikis nailed him at second when he tried to steal the base with ball in the pitcher's box. Lewis drew a walk and Walker moved him to third with a double to center. Then the proceedings went ludicrous. Bonura tapped a ball 6 feet in front of the plate and both Mustaikis and Catcher Joe Glenn wrestled for possession of it. Mustaikis won, and promptly threw the ball into the dirt past Foxx, Lewis and Walker scoring.

Mustaikis Chased

Buddy Myer knocked Mustaikis out of the box in the seventh. With Lewis on base, the Red Sox strategy called for Cecil Travis to be purposely passed to bring Myer to plate. He met that challenged with a double to left that scored his two pals and upped the Nats' lead to 7 to 3.

Monteagudo gave up only one run after the fourth inning. That happened in the ninth, when Di Maggio and Finney doubled, with one out. But any Boston notions of staging a last-ditch uprising were dispelled when Foxx and Williams lifted harmless flies to the outfield.

In that first game, Leonard and Grove were meeting for the first time since their 1-to-0 duel on open-

Pirates Beat Cards Twice, Rise to Fifth

DiMaggio's Two-Run Homer Wins 2d, 4-1; Opener Captured, 7-6

By the Associated Press

St. Louis, July 7.—Pittsburgh's Pirates took over fifth place from the St. Louis Cardinals today with a brace of victories, 7 to 6 and 4 to 1, although outhit in both games.

But only one of the eight St. Louis hits in the second game did damage—Terry More's eighth home run of the year in the eighth with the bases empty.

Moore aided the Pittsburgh cause in the first inning of the second game when Arky Vaughan's single got through him, the ball rolled to the flag pole and Vaughan scored behind the walking Robert Elliott.

In the second inning Vincent DiMaggio hit a home run, scoring behind Maurice Van Robays who got on base through Martin Marion's error.

Two big innings, the first with three runs and the sixth with four, accounted for the Pirates' seven runs in the opener. St. Louis scored five in the first, another in the fourth. Enos Slaughter of the Cardinals hit his seventh home run of the season in this game.

A's Pummell Yanks After Losing First

Macks Win 2d Game, 10-5, Shelling Gomez; Champs Take 1st, 6-3

By International News Service

Philadelphia, July 7.—The Athletics pounded out a 10-to-5 victory over New York in the second game of a double-header today after the Yankees vanquished Philadelphia, 6 to 3, in the opener.

Lefty Gomez started for the Yanks in the second game, was shelled from the mouth in the sixth and ultimately was charged with his first loss of the season. All told, the A's collected 12 hits off three pitchers, clinching the victory with a four-run rally in the sixth. Nelson Potter was the winning hurler, limiting New York to six hits, including Bill Dickey's homer.

In the opener, the Yanks greeted Rookie Porter Vaughan with four runs in the first, enough to assure them of their only victory in a four-game series with the Mackmen.

Report Farley Will Head Yanks Officially Denied

Larchmont, N. Y., July 7 (INS).—Ed Barrow, vice president of the far-flung New York Yankees baseball system, today denied, once again, that he knew anything of the report that Postmaster General James A. Farley will resign his political posts to head the vast estimated $4,000,000 baseball enterprise.

"I'd be glad to see Jim Farley at the head of the Yankees," Barrow said in an interview at his Larchmont home. "I do not know, however, whether there is any truth to the current report.

Barrow's statement followed on the heels of a report that Farley, backed by a syndicate headed by former Gov. James Cox of Ohio, were planning to buy the baseball estate of the late Col. Jake Ruppert.

Hutchinson Goes Back to Tigers

Buffalo, N. Y., July 7 (AP).—Freddie Hutchinson wound up his brief stay in the International League today by pitching the Buffalo Bisons to a 7-5 victory over the league-leading Rochester Red Wings in the first game of a double-header.

Hutchinson, who cost the Detroit Tigers $75,000, was recalled a few days ago after making a fine comeback here. Today's victory was his seventh for the Bisons since he joined the club in the middle of May. He gave up ten hits, struck out five and granted only two walks.

Feller Walks In Crucial Run As Chisox Win

Loss Drops Indians To Runner-Up Spot; Lyons Is Winner

By the Associated Press

Cleveland, July 7.—The Indians and their pitching ace, Bob Feller, blew up in the ninth inning today and surrendered first place to Detroit as the Chicago White Sox defeated the Tribe, 3 to 1.

The Tigers meanwhile scored a 5 to 2 victory over St. Louis to take a half-game lead.

After eight frames of air-tight ball behind superb hurling by Feller and 39-year-old Ted Lyons, the Indians and Sox entered the final inning in a 1-to-1 deadlock.

Error Started Rally

Luke Appling led off with a grounder to Ken Keltner, whose wild throw permitted Appling to reach second. Feller walked Mike Tresh. Kennedy laid down a sacrifice but the runways were loaded as Appling beat out Feller's throw to third. Lyons fanned.

Ken Silvestri batted for Jimmy Webb and worked Feller for a walk, forcing in Appling. Keltner threw out Mike Kreevich and Tresh scored on the play. Joe Kuhel popped for the third out.

The Sox turned the tide without a hit.

Sammy Hale, batting for Feller, dropped a double to open the Tribe's half of the ninth. He reached third on Lou Boudreau's grounder, but

Dodgers Bow to Bees Twice, Lose N. L. Lead

Boston Wins, 2-1, 1-0, Before 21,928 Fans Salvo Takes Nightcap Though Wyatt Gives Only 4 Hits; Bill Posedel Credited With First

By International News Service

Boston, July 7.—The Boston Bees toppled the Brooklyn Dodgers from first place in the National League today, sweeping a double-header, 1 to 0 and 2 to 1, before a crowd of 21,928.

Manuel Salvo hurled the first game for Boston, besting Whitlow Wyatt, who pegged a four-hitter for the Flatbush clan. Wyatt's downfall came in the eighth inning when Miller walked, went to second on a sacrifice and scored on Johnny Cooney's single.

The Bees hopped on Tex Carleton for a run in each of the first two innings of the second game to give Sailor Bill Posedel his winning margin. Dick Coffman relieved Posedel with two out in the ninth, one run in and the winning runs on the bases and fanned Pinch Hitter Joe Vosmik.

Dolf Camilli, Dodger first baseman, suffered a bruised neck in the third inning of the first game when he collided with Buddy Hassett while fielding the latter's slow roller. He was taken to St. Elizabeth's Hospital, where an X-ray showed the injury was not serious. He will be confined to the hospital overnight for observation. Hassett was shaken up and left the game the following inning.

Brooklyn rooters, numbering about 1,000 came by special train to see the games.

Walk to Arnovich With Bases Filled Returns Team to Lead

By International News Service

Chicago, July 7.—A base on balls issued to Morrie Arnovich in the eighth with the bases filled today restored the Cincinnati Reds to first place in the National League with a 4-to-3 win over the Chicago Cubs.

The Reds picked up a run in the first on singles by Lew Riggs and Ival Goodman' plus McCormick's long fly. In the third, they collected two more on Riggs' double and Goodman's homer, his seventh of the season. Then with two out in the eighth, Bill Lee passed McCormick, and Willard Hershberger followed with a single. Craft filled the bases when Herman fumbled, and Arnovich walked on four pitches.

Lee's single in the fifth scored Bobby Mattick for the Cubs' first tally. Chicago tied the game up in the seventh, when Pinch Hitter Han Leiber singled to drive in Lee and Stan Mack.

Picard and Peacock Win Red Cross Play-off With Best Ball 65

Claude Rippy, Spencer Bow By One Shot

14 Birdies Mark Indian Spring Play; Peacock and Rippy Stars in Foursome

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

One of the smoothest pro-amateur combinations ever to compete in a local tournament, National P. G. A. Champion Henry Picard and Indian Spring's simon-pure ace, Roger Peacock, won the Red Cross benefit play-off yesterday over the Four Corners course with a seven-under-par best ball 65. East Potomas Professional Cliff Spencer and Amateur Claude Rippy, also of the host club, lost by a single shot, compiling a best ball 66.

Rippy dropped a curling 15-footer for a birdie 3 on the eighteenth green to reduce the margin to one stroke, after Peacock and Picard led by two strokes from the eleventh hole. The match was actually not as close as the final count.

Peacock, Rippy Under Par

Aided by favorable scoring on holes where the putts were not holed out, Peacock and Rippy were each three under par with 69's, while Picard was one under with a 71 and Spencer, whose putter was working so poorly he almost snapped it over his knee on the thirteenth hole, was even par 72.

The play-off was a continuation of Thursday's big event, where a dozen national stars competed in the 18-hole tournament, with all proceeds going to the war relief fund of the American Red Cross. Several hundred fans watched yesterday's match between the teams that tied with best ball 64s.

Picard and Peacock each received diamond-studded gold medals from Indian Spring Club Owner A. S. Kay for the victory.

Peacock was the individual star of the match. The host club champion knocked in five birdies and a big 5-footer for a par on the seventeenth, while Picard was a perfect partner. The Hershey professional dropped a telling 20-foot putt for a birdie on the fourth hole to square the match, a sidehill 10-footer on the eighth to keep his team from going over par, and a tough 8-footer on the eleventh for a birdie three, where Peacock was over par with a five. On the latter putt, Picard and Peacock held a several-minute consultation as to the line Picard should follow, and the P. G. A. champ then knocked the ball in the cup.

Peacock Sinks 20-Footer

Peacock rammed home a 20-footer for a birdie, one of the 14 made by the foursome, on the first hole. He chipped dead for a birdie on the sixth and thrilled the home-green crowd on the ninth by banging home a sidehill downhill 45-foot putt for a birdie three. However, Picard was laying right by the cup for his birdie if Peacock missed.

Roger barely missed an eagle on the twelfth and easily tapped in his birdie putt, while his last sub-par effort was on the sixteenth, where he almost holed out a shot from the bank of a trap.

Rippy was off to a great start. He dropped iron shots close to the pin on 1 and 2 and dropped short birdie putts, and starting the back nine, he repeated his initial effort with another birdie, almost a "gimmie." His other two birdies were on the twelfth, via two putts, and his home hole effort. However, Claude missed two other putts shorter than the length of his putter for birdies that hurt, and Spencer was a partner in crime, missing short ones on 3 and 13.

The East Potomac pro, after his great 66 of Thursday, simply had an off day with his mallet-head putter, and in addition was often wild with woods and irons. He missed the two short ones and several others of sinkable distances. He finished with a par 72, but in comparison with the others it looked as though he had 80.

Astor Clarke's Rally Fails at Belle Haven

Bowler, Dormie Seven Down, Wins 6 Holes In Row But Three-Putts 18th Green; Miss Kay Wins Trophy; Tie at Capital

Astor Clarke, the Nation's No. 1 bowler, pulled a golf comeback that would befit the National Open champion yesterday at Belle Haven but when it was all over he was just the runner-up in the Belle Haven Bowl finals.

The ace duckpin artist of the last four years, who is also a member of the FBI Federal golf champions, was seven down and seven to play to Frank Woolley in the 36-hole finals when he won six holes in a row and then three-putted the last green to lose the match.

Clarke was apparenlty in for a bad beating when Woolley played the first nine holes in 36 and was four up. The new champion was back in 38 for a 74 and led seven up at the end of the morning round. Clarke improved on the third nine, but he couldn't reduce the advantage and he was seven down and nine to play. Then he won the twenty-eighth, but lost the twenty-ninth, and was dormie seven.

Here the bowler-golfer-G-man went to work. He won the thirtieth with a par and the next three holes with birdies. Woolley missed par on the thirty-fourth and thirty-fifth, and Clarke took advantage of the lapse on both holes and after winning six in a row was just one down and one to play. He knocked a tee shot on the short thirty-sixth on the green, and his opponent missed. Woolley chipped 6 feet from the cup and Clarke went for his deuce, but missed and went 5 feet past. Woolley missed his putt, but Clarke's great rally faltered here and he missed the 5-footer and Woolley finally won the match, one up.

Little Shades Oliver in First Of Golf Series

National Open Champ Wins, 1 Up, With 138; Loser's Putting Is Off

By the Associated Press

Buffalo, N. Y., July 7.—National Open Golf Champion Lawson Little defeated Ed Oliver, Hornell, N. Y., pro, one up in the first match of a "consolation" series at nearby Williamsville Park Club today before a gallery of about 1,000.

Both players shot brilliant golf, and each finished with a 138 medal score, six under par, for the 36-hole match.

Oliver, who was disqualified in the National Open at Cleveland for starting his final round ahead of time, was two up on Little on the twenty-sixth. The National Open titleholder was equal to the task, however, and won the twenty-seventh, twenty-ninth and thirty-first. They halved the last five holes.

Oliver's main difficulty was his putting.

"It was good golf all day," he said, "only I never played 36 holes and had so many shots around the cup."

The series—best-of-five—was proposed by Little after Oliver had played out the final round at the National Open and brought in a disallowed score which would have tied for first. The players said their next match was not scheduled yet.

In the first round this morning, Little sank 12-foot putts for birdies on the first and second holes to start out two up. Oliver's birdie 3 on the fifteenth evened the match, but Little took the seventeenth to go one up. Their medal scores were: Little, 68; Oliver, 69.

Frank Kovacs Wins Over Elwood Cooke

Glen Cove, N. Y., July 7 (AP).—Frank Kovacs, the tall young tennis slugger from Don Budge's home town, Oakland, Calif., won the twenty-sixth annual Nassau Country Club Invitation tournament today by defeating Elwood Cooke, of Portland, Oreg., 6—4, 6—2, 3—6, 4—6, 6—4.

Hailed as a possible successor to Budge because of his forcing power and his remarkably effective backhand, Kovacs lived up to his billing for the first two sets. He fairly overpowered the sixth-ranking star, then began to let down and Cooke all but saved the match. The Oregonian, fighting back gamely and showing a fine forehand of his own, took two sets and led Kovacs 4—0 in the fifth set on the Californian's serve. Kovacs finally won out on his own fast, flat service together with an unaccountable weakening of Cooke's forehand.

Bob Carrothers Wins School Tennis Title

Rallies to Defeat Cochell in Finals, 3-6, 5-7, 8-6, 6-3, 6-1

By the Associated Press

Haverford, Pa., July 7.—In a stirring all-California final, Robert Carrothers, of Coronado High School, fought back from the brink of defeat today to win the National Interscholastic Tennis Championship with a five-set victory over Earl Cochell, of Los Angeles, 3—6, 5—7, 8—6, 6—3, 6—1.

Cochell held match point three times in the third set, but Carrothers staved him off and came on with a rush to win the last three sets and the title.

Vic Seixas and Bill Vogt, of Philadelphia, won the doubles championship, beating Carrothers and Bob Crawford, of Coronado, 6—2, 6—3, 6—4.

Carrothers succeeds Ted Olewine, of Santa Monica, Calif., as schoolboy champion. Olewine was not eligible to defend the title.

The victor and vanquished had broken even in two previous matches this year, but Carrothers entered the tournament seeded No. 1.

In the first set, Cochell twice smashed his opponent's service with sizzling backhand placements. He won five games straight to capture the first set and take a 2-to-1 lead in the second before Carrothers rallied.

A service ace put the Los Angeles contender in front, 6 to 5, after his rival had kept the match even in the second set. Then Carrothers lost the set with two successive outs.

Cochell led, 5—2, and had Carrothers 40 to 30 in the eighth game of the third set, but failed to slip over match point. After Carrothers pulled up to 5 to 4, Cochell had two match points at 40 to 15, but once more failed to get over the winning point. Carrothers went ahead at 7 to 6 and finally won the set on a blazing service ace.

Carrothers easily won the fourth set, then in the last set Cochell was seized with a cramp and Carrothers ran off five straight games and the match.

Bates Defeats Kent for State Golf Honors

Par-Equaling Round Of 71 Wins Virginia Amateur Title, 9 and 8

By the Associated Press

Hot Springs, Va., July 7.—Meteoric young Sam Bates, of Norfolk, blazed around the difficult Cascades course in par-equaling 71 and a 6-up advantage over Charlie Kent, of Richmond, for 18 holes today and then went on to win the State amateur golf championship 9 and 8.

Although he eased up on the afternoon round and went 3 over par through the last 10 holes of the match, the 26-year-old Norfolk City and Tidewater amateur champion was only 2 over par through 133 holes of qualifying and match play, including the 9-hole play-off in which he lost medal honors to Wynsol Spencer, last year's champion.

Playing under overcast skies most of the day, Bates on the first hole jumped into a lead over his stocky, experienced opponent, who is Richmond City champion, and was never behind.

Bates Goes 1-Up

Kent squared the match at the third hole, but Bates went 1-up again at the fourth and made it 2-up on the seventh. Kent cut this to 1-up at the ninth, Bates took the tenth and Kent rallied to take the twelfth, but from there on the Norfolk boy turned on the heat to take the thirteenth, fourteenth, sixteenth, seventeenth and eighteenth to lead 6-up at the intermission.

The new champion, who shot two-over-par 73 in the qualifying round and was one under regulation figures through 12 holes of the semi-final match against Aulick Burke, of Petersburg, had a one-over-par 36 on the outgoing nine this morning and a one-under-par 35 on the incoming nine for a 71 total. He took a three-over-par 38 on the outgoing nine this afternoon and a par four on the decisive tenth hole.

Bates, superior in every department of play, had the distinct edge in putting on the tricky Cascades greens and credited much of his success to a putter borrowed from Chandler Harper, Portsmouth pro, who used it when he first won the State Amateur title over this course in July, 1930.

Trojans' Foley Wins Eastern College Net Play

Greenberg Routed; Dee and Wade Win Doubles on Rally

By the Associated Press

Montclair, N. J., July 7.—George Toley, Indian-blooded tennis ace from the University of Southern California, captured the Eastern intercollegiate net title today by pounding to victory over another Westerner, Seymour Greenberg, of Northwestern, 6—3, 6—2, 6—4.

Toley, seeded second, had it all over Third-ranking Greenberg as he displayed his best form of the tournament.

Southpaw Greenberg put out Top-ranking Isadore Bellis, of University of Pennsylvania, in the semifinals yesterday, and Toley eliminated a Trojan teammate, Myron McNamara.

The doubles title was won by Larry Dee and James Wade, of Stanford, national collegiate doubles champions, as they rallied in the last two sets to stop Kenneth Bartlett and William Reedy, of Southern California, 6—4, 5—7, 3—6, 6—2, 6—3.

Southern California won the team title with 40 points, trailed by Stanford with 18, Northwestern with 11 and Utah, 10. The other scores were: North Carolina and Pennsylvania, 7 each; Miami, 6; St. John's of Brooklyn, Louisiana State and Pace, 3 each; Rice and Muhlenberg, 1 each.

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

Ferndale, N. Y., July 7.—You hear about hard punches in the ring, but how many fighters have there been who could knock out an opponent with a single punch? The answer is "darn few," but one of that select circle is up here now, training to meet one of the most remarkable men in ring history. We mean that murderous punching Lew Jenkins, who is here working up a systematic hate for Henry Armstrong, the triples champion.

CONSIDINE

In Jenkins' boney right arm, and hard fist, is vested a punch so unerring and so devastating that one good swing is enough to render his average opponent, just as Jenkins himself has been so rendered, null and void. He can (and did today) throw that right from any angle, any position, and brutally hurt his man with it. With it he can uppercut, or shoot it straight, or shoot it overhand, or even hook it.

Mickey La Marr, one of his sparring mates, told us: "In a gym I can go three rounds against anybody, and I never expect anybody, and I never expect to be hit with more than one solid punch. But this guy hits you a good belt every 10 seconds. Thank gosh he's using them big gloves—for he throws bombs, that guy does."

Joe Louis, for all his hitting power, couldn't be called a one-punch knocker-outer—even though he stopped Paolina Uzcudun and Eddie Simms with what amounted to a single belt. He is more of a flurry fighter, and his victims invariably get up for more when he downs them. Jenkins likes to cool them out quickly with one pile-driving swing that causes them "to lay there like a poled ox."

Jimmy Johnston, who goes back 50 or 60 years, says that the only one-punch heavyweight was Georges Carpentier. Dempsey certainly wasn't—or Tunney would have lost his heavyweight title and Willard never would have been able to come up for the second round.

The one-punch knocker-outers were not usually champions. They lacked some refinement, some all around ability which enabled versatile contemporaries to ward them off and lick them. It is generally accepted that they were Charley White, a lightweight of Leonard's era, George Chaney, young Otto, Aurelio Herrara, Willie Jackson, Joe Gans, and maybe one or two others.

This Jenkins is an interesting sort. He's a tall lightweight champ, which is rather unusual. From a distance of 10 yards he looks as underfed as a spavined greyhound. But up close you see that he is a vessel of long, tough muscles, with a tight casing of skin. His legs look thin. But they are very strong and he is learning to keep them together. His shoulder blades stick out like a book in a sausage skin, but all the fat was worked out of him during the years he chopped cotton in Texas and there is only dynamite therein. He is full of fire and very restless. After a tough workout he is likely to grab a horse, ride off madly and take the jumps on the jumping course. Or he'll swim a couple of miles, or go roller skating at a nearby rink, or get out on the baseball field and play in the slam-bank manner of Pepper Martin.

Hymie Caplan, his current manager, frets a lot about these things, but Jenkins spurns his advice to him, and his warnings that he might hurt himself.

"You trying to make me a sissy pants?" Jenkins roars in his Texas drawl, "if you are I won't stand it."

This is how he's going to fight Armstrong: Instead of backing away from Hennery in a straight line, giving ground before Armstrong's low-headed rush, and popping away at him, Jenkins plans to stand his ground and jump back and forth—never backward. Few, if any, opponents of Armstrong's have ever tried this. Backing away and trying to land with a right has seemed to be the easier way to battle the only man who ever held three titles simultaneously.

Jenkins figures that Armstrong is not 70 per cent of the fighter who beat Sarron, Ross and Ambers for the featherweight, welterweight and lightweight titles. He is convinced that he can beat him. In fact, he says that he can't go back to Sweetwater, Tex., if he loses. So he doesn't plan to lose.

Hagerstown Goes Bigtime With Start of Meeting Tomorrow

Totalizator, Electric Gate Innovations

Half-Mile Season Opens Hereabouts; Horses Plentiful; Track Resurfaced

By Walter Haight

Maryland's half-mile racing season, once little more than a few puffs af hamburger-flavored dust, swings into action tomorrow with class written all over it. Once an added attraction to various county fairs, smaller track racing now has driven the prize hogs, canned corn and crocheted tablecloths to cover with a brand of the sport of kings that has gathered momentum with the passing of the years.

For instance, the Hagerstown Fair Association opens its 10-day meeting tomorrow and offers such racing conveniences as the betting totalizator, the Puett starting gate, the Thomas photo-finish camera, a special race rain and big-league eating facilities. While the very nature of half-mile racing, which keeps the fans close to the horses, makes for a homey spirit, there's no denying that the smaller ovals have gone a bit high-hat.

Improvements Demanded

But the public should like it. The fans have come to demand electric odds-boards, cameras and stall-gate starting equipment. Modernizing racing may subtract a bit from the color, but it makes for better conduct of the sport. The electric gate, in particular, is a welcome feature on tracks where sharp turns make starts all the more important.

Hagerstown's problem is not lack of horses, but how to sooth those applicants for stalls who had to be turned away. The majority of the winners at Charles Town will campaign and Delaware Park also will be heavily represented. In addition there have been shipments from New York and New England. General Manager Harold Bester hung out the standing room only sign two weeks ago.

Hagerstown will draw most of its riders from those who performed at Charles Town and Wheeling, although several new faces are on the list.

Edward J. Brennan, as usual, will be racing secretary. Brennan stepped up the ladder to do a swell job at Delaware Park during the meeting which closed last week, and he can be counted upon to make the most of the thoroughbred material on hand.

Track Resurfaced

Good news to jockeys, horsemen and customers is the fact that the oval has been resurfaced and the infield fences have been relocated. Work has been going on all spring and it should make for safer and truer racing.

Hagerstown is the first stop of the five-circuit course of the half-mile season. Each session is of ten days. Belair follows Hagerstown, opening on July 24. Cumberland takes the spotlight, starting August 6. Marlboro comes into its own beginning August 21, after which Timonium makes its stand with opening day September 2.

And just to keep the record straight, the big-time begins at Havre de Grace September 14. Laurel opens October 2, Pimlico November 1, Bowie November 16 and Charles Town December 2. Then we will be right back where we started from.

Post time at Hagerstown is 2:30 p. m.

G. W. First in D. C. Women's Tennis

The Nationals lost their lead to George Washington and dropped to second place in last week's District of Columbia Women's Tennis League competition. Standards, meantime, moved up to threaten the Nationals' hold on the runner-up position.

Mrs. Edward Craig, of Army-Navy, became the first player to complete her eight matches for the season, ending up with an enviable record of six victories and two losses.

McIntire Wins, 5 to 1

Lefty McIntire pitched Southwest Market nine to a 5-1 victory over Leesburg yesterday on the out-of-town diamond. Only six hits were made by the losers, while Donaldson and Yates turned in a pair of triples each for the winners.

Joe Louis Shoots 282 At Langston

Colored Title Goes To Pittsburgh Golfer With Total of 226

The colored Eastern Open and amateur golf championship attracted thousands of spectators to the Langston golf course yesterday but the good golfers were of secondary interest—Joe Louis was the man they wanted to see.

Lieut. H. T. Miskell, of the Park Police, estimated that between 2,000 and 3,000 galleryites tramped the course on the heels of the heavyweight champion of the world. The Brown Bomber, however, is a better fighter than golfer, for he added 95 and 90 to his 97 of Saturday for a 282 total. It took police and Boy Scouts to handle the crowd that grew each day since the event started Friday.

David Wilson, of Pittsburgh, won the championship by adding a 74 and a par 70 to his previous 82 for a 226 total. Plesant Goodwin, locker room attendant at the Chevy Chase Club, tied the first day's leader, Cecil Shamwell, for second with 227. Goodwin had 76—76—75 and Shamwell 74—78—75.

Isaac McDonald, Philadelphia, was fourth with 81—75—75 for 231, while D. C. Open Champ Claude Ross was fifth with 75—82—75 for 232.

James Williams featured the day's play with a hole in one on the 150-yard fourth hole.

Nats Defeat Red Sox, 7-4; Lose First, 7-1

Leonard Beaten In Opener; Nightcap Won by Monteagudo

ing day. The honors again belonged to Grove. The ancient southpaw pitched two-hit ball through the first four innings and gave up a run only in the fifth, when Ferrell tripled down the leftfield line and scored when Leonard beat out a single to Cronin in deep short.

Walk Begets Sox Run

One of the four walks Leonard issued was converted into the first Boston run, in the second inning, with the help of Finney's single to center. In the third the Red Sox gave Grove four more runs to work with and clinched the ball game.

Those four runs were brutal matters for Leonard who should have escaped the inning undamaged. He struck out Doerr with one out, but the knuckle ball got away from Ferrell for an error and Doerr reached first. Cramer singled to center, Foxx flied out, Williams singled to center to drive home one run, and Finney doubled to left to score two more. A fourth run crossed the plate when Pofahl made a wild throw on Tabor's grounder.

That gave the Red Sox a 5-0 lead, and there wasn't much the Nats could do about it. Cronin inspired another Boston run in the sixth with a lnog triple against the centerfield wall, and in the seventh Williams doubled and scored when Finney's grounder hopped over Bonura's head for a freak single. But with Grove pitching the way he was, he didn't need those last five Boston runs.

Baseball and Boxing Oddities; What Famed Bout Was Dull?

Corbett and Jackson Struck Not a Punch for 9 Rounds; 100,000 'Crash' Game in China

By Russ Newland

Associated Press Sports Editor.

San Francisco, July 7.—Questions and Answers (a Monday morning service maintained for businessmen too tired to do their own thinking):

Q. What famed prize fight became so dull fans either booed and hissed or went to sleep in their seats?

A. The James J. Corbett-Peter Jackson match of May 21, 1891, in San Francisco, which was declared "no contest" at the start of the sixty-second round. The mill lasted 4 hours 4 minutes. From the forty-ninth to the fifty-ninth rounds not a blow was struck, the principals walking around the ring. In the fifty-ninth round Referee Hiram Cook suggested a bit of action, advising "this is not a walking match." Corbett had all the better of the actual fighting the first 30 rounds.

Q. What is the smallest baseball crowd on record?

A. The turnout for a 1906 Pacific Coast League game at Fresno between the home team and Los Angeles. Mike Fisher, owner of the Fresno club, says the umpire stepped out to announce the batteries, doffed his cap and began: "Ladies and Gent—Dear Sir."

Q. The largest baseball crowd?

A. At Canton, China, where 150,000 were on hand to see Coast League All-Stars perform in 1908. The same Mike Fisher had the club on tour of the Orient. He claims 100,000 Chinese jumped over the fence. At Tokyo, where 65,000 attended, Fisher collected on 2,000 paid admissions. More fence jumpers.

Q. Who was the first woman reporter to cover a fight?

A. The illustrious Annie Laurie, who in San Francisco, May 31, 1892, from a curtained booth saw the John Murphys of Australia and Boston, respectively, battle 25 rounds. "I have seen a prize fight," she wrote in the Examiner. Later in the story she commented, "Men have a world into which women cannot enter." Times have changed.

Q. What action did Pacific Coast Conference representatives take at Sun Valley which hasn't been published and won't cause much excitement when it is?

Margo Lee Goes After Second Net Title Today

Starts Drive to Take Crown; Mrs. Herbert Top Seeded in Tourney

Margo Lee, youthful Vassar College graduate, will be out to strip Willie O'Steen Herbert of a second local tennis title this summer today when both open fire for the District Women's championship at Columbia Country Club. Miss Lee recently dethroned Mrs. Herbert as City of Washington champion by trouncing her in the finals.

Mrs. Herbert, the defending champion, is top-seeded in the tournament, with Anna Dayette, of Baltimore, second; Miss Lee, third, and Charlotte Decker, fourth. Miss Lee is ranked below both Mrs. Herbert and Anna Dayette because both had higher ratings last year.

A field of 25 is entered. There will be 12 matches today.

Today's pairings:

First round—2 p. m., Willie Herbert vs. LaJeanne Echols; Ann Harrison vs. Margot Parsons; Margo Lee vs. Lisa Bloede; Frances Rowan vs. Hazel Bishop; Elizabeth Sowers vs. Mrs. James Karrick; Charlotte Decker vs. Dorette Miller; Cynthia Olmstead vs. Margot Graham. 3:30, Anna Dayette vs. Elinor Finckle; Barbara Conrad vs. Joan Bransford. 4:30, Eleanor Fishburne vs. Virginia McMenamin; Edna Vest vs. Frances Carter; Marian Pritchard vs. Helen Davis. Eleanor Voith drew bye in first round.

Softball Teams Open Title Play

The annual Middle Atlantic championship softball tournament opens tonight at Ballston with a schedule of two games. At 7:45, Overnight Transportation of Baltimare will met Powers Builders, and at 9, the defending Champion Senate Beer team of Washington will engage Cameo Furniture, also of this city.

Overnight, undefeated in games at Ballston Park this season, boasts victories over International Business Machine and Standard Line. Powers Builders have a heavy hitting club and will be tough to beat if their ace pitcher, "Popeye" Gross, is in form.

The game between Senate and Cameo looms as a real thriller. The Furnituremen won both halves of the fast Dixie Night League championship race. Abe Rosenfeld, generally considered one of the outstanding softball pitchers in the game, will hurl for Senate, and Arnold, former Texas sensation and new member of Cameo, will be his opponent.

The tournament will continue Wednesday night at Ballston with games between Greenbelt and Dixie Tavern, and I. B. M. and Bethlehem Steel of Baltimore.

FBI Shooter Third in East Rifle Tourney

Walter Walsh Among Leaders in Aggregate Score Competition

By the Associated Press

Camp Ritchie, Md., July 7.—William Schweitzer, of Hillside, N. J., won the Eastern Regional small bore rifle championship today with an eight-match aggregate score of 3,178.

Ransford Triggs, of Madison, N. J., finished a close second with 3,170, and John A. Bare, of Shillington, Pa., was third with 3,167.

The final day of the tournament saw two new world's records set. H. O. Hildeton of Fort Meade, Md., a member of the U. S. Infantry pistol team, won the individual timed fire .45-caliber match, scoring 198 out of a possible 200 to better the record held for four years by Harry Reeves, of the Detroit Police.

Al Hemming, Detroit policeman, set the other record by shooting a 290 over the National Match course with a .45-caliber weapon. The title previously was held by Mark L. Wheeler, of the Los Angeles police, who was not at this meet.

With the title Schweitzer won a free trip to the National Rifle and Pistol matches at Camp Perry, Ohio, in September. A second trip, awarded to the small-bore rifle victor in the lower classifications, went to Samuel Kurtz, of Lebanon, Pa., who posted 3,161 for the eight matches, 11 points ahead of Charles N. Herman, of New Tripoli, Po. O. F. Thiessen, of Halethorpe, Md., was third.

Jim Lacy of New Haven, Conn., won the individual Eastern Small-bore Rifle Association championship, scoring 2,013 points in six matches. Bill Woodring, of Alton, Ill., was three points behind him.

The Capital City Rifle Club, of Washington, D. C., won the final match of the tournament—the Palma four-man event, scoring 898 to beat out the Quinnipiac Rifle Club of New Haven by two points.

Dr. W. R. Stokes and Chester Woo, of the Washington team, shot perfect scores of 225 over the difficult 200-yard course.

Hemming won the all-around aggregate trophy, scoring a grand total of 2,584 for all pistol matches. H. L. Benner, of the U. S. Infantry team, was second and Walter Walsh, of the FBI, Washington, winner of the Eastern pistol championship, was third.

Million Jobs Seen for Youth In U. S. Defense

This Will Still Leave Many Unemployed, Holland Declares

By the Associated Press

America's 3,900,000 unemployed youths loom large in the Nation's defense program today.

Kenneth Holland, associate director of the American Youth Commission, estimates more than 1,000,000 young men and women may be involved if plans now under discussion are carried out.

He lists these prospects:

Enlistment of 200,000 idle youth in the Army, Navy, Air Corps and Marines if the selective service draft is applied to increase the Nation's armed strength to 855,000.

Training of perhaps 550,000 young men and women under the National Youth Administration in various trades, if expansions now under discussion are effected.

Training for 300,000

Training of another 300,000 youths as cooks, mechanics, truck drivers and similar vocations in the Civilian Conservation Corps.

Possible employment, directly or indirectly, of another 200,000 by private industry because of expanding war industries.

"Prospects for the estimated 3,900,000 unemployed youth—so far as finding work on either Government projects or private industry—become considerably better since development of an active program for national defense," says Holland, who has been assigned by the commission to study the youth labor problem.

"But the United States still will be faced with a major unemployed, out-of-school youth problem."

Included in the latest estimate of 3,900,000 unemployed youth, he said, are young men and women now temporarily employed in such organizations as the CCC and the NYA.

Training of youth to carry on effective roles in time of war would be included in present programs, which would be expanded by the various Government agencies, he says.

Also, $15,000,000 recently appropriated to the Office of Education would be used to train students now attending State-sponsored schools for various trades important in case of war.

American steps to organize its youth for defensive war are described as far ahead of those taken by France and England when the danger of conflict first appeared in those countries.

Other Nations' Programs

"We have not yet taken anything like the steps that Germany, Italy and Russia have taken to organize youth for the purposes of war, however," Holland says.

America's CCC, organized in 1933, was one of the first major experiments in camp work plans for youth.

France's youth program was largely military, Holland said. In England, vocational training was offered on a limited scale.

"Italian and Russian youth camps were given over to military training, but in Germany six months of physical and premilitary training first was given on various work projects and then two years of military training followed," Holland says.

"In Germany much emphasis was placed on instilling the National Socialist Party principles and spirit."

"With modern mechanized warfare so highly developed as it is, it is more important than ever before that trained manpower be on hand to keep lines of communication open," he concludes.

La Follette Sees U. S. Facing Same 'Dry Rot' as Allies

Chicago, July 7 (AP).—Philip F. La Follette, former Progressive Governor of Wisconsin, declared today that "our country is in danger—terrible danger—not alone from abroad but at home."

"The same dry rot that wrecked Britain and France is here and the same Chamberlains," he asserted in a radio address.

"But for 20 years our leaders—Republicans as well as Democrats—have preached false doctrines. Year after year our leaders have told us everything was all right, when down deep something was all wrong.

"Modern war is total war. Every able-bodied man and woman, every resource is needed. A nation that delays putting its house in order until after it is attacked is whipped before it starts.

"We canno buy national defense. We shall have to sweat and toil for it. That is why the first step is to correct the mistaken idea that we have been suffering from overproduction."

THESE KIDNAPPINGS HAVE GOT TO STOP!
THAT'S EASIER SAID THAN DONE!

Famous daughter note: Kate Smith, of the Washington Smiths, has had her contract with CBS extended on a noncancelable basis until January 1, 1943. The new contract, covering both her weekly variety hour on the network and her week day "Kate Smith Speaks" show, supersedes one which was to have expired a year earlier. While the variety hour is on vacation, Kate is managing to combine business and pleasure by broadcasting her daily "chat" from her summer home at Lake Placid.

Sports note: "Gentleman Gene" Tunney, the former boxing champion, goes in for some verbal sparring on CBS's sports quiz "Choose Up Sides" this Friday. It's to be heard on WJSV at 7:30 p. m. Gene can't expect, however, to outdo the record made on the quiz by another pretty well known boxer. That's Joe Louis, who got his answers 100 per cent correct a couple of weeks ago.

Versatility note: That goose-pimpling voice you used to hear over the radio when "The Shadow" was up to his frightening tasks belonged to Actor Frank Readick.

Personal note: As if your correspondent, a shy young thing, wasn't embarrassed enough at having to ask so many elemental questions, thanks to his two-day newness around WJSV, the departing Mr. Slocum is doing what he can to further it. I now have to go around plaintively asking for a key to the office every time I want to get in. Mr. S. carried the key away with him in his carefree way.

Contract Bridge

It shows how Mrs. V. D. P. rescued her four-spade, doubled, contract by safeguarding a winner and neatly discarding a loser.

Today's Hand

East-West Vulnerable
EAST DEALER

NORTH: ♠ Q 7 4 ♡ K 6 4 2 ◇ A 8 ♣ K 9 7 5
WEST: ♠ K 6 3 2 ♡ A Q J 10 ◇ 9 7 ♣ Q 4 3
EAST: ♠ 9 ♡ 8 ◇ K J 10 9 ♣ 6 4 3 2
SOUTH: ♠ A J 10 8 5 ♡ 5 3 ◇ 7 6 ♣ A Q J 10

The bidding:

East	South	West	North
Pass	1 ♠	2 ♡	2 ♠
3 ◇	Pass (1)	3 ♡	3 ♠ (2)
4 ◇	4 ♠ (2)	Dble.	Pass
Pass (3) Pass

Opening lead: A ♡.

The admiring husband, V. D. P., writes:

"The defense played it well, but Mrs. V. D. P. played better. The ace of hearts was followed by the queen, and dummy ducked! East discarded the diamond nine. To the third trick fell the diamond queen, diamond ace and five and six. A small spade to the ace took the fourth trick. M'lady led a club to the king and now took the heart king in the hope (because of West's double) that East was blanked of trumps by now. Thus the diamond seven was discarded. The rest was easy; trumps could then be led.

"No other defense gets near to setting the hand, as the chance to draw trumps early limits the losers to one diamond, one heart and one trump."

Mrs. V. D. P. made four spades, doubled, losing two hearts and a spade.

Here is her husband's comment on the bidding:

"(1) Forcing pass, as East had originally passed.

"(2) We needed a game.

"(3) After some hesitation."

French Nab British Ships, Japan Hears

Hongkong (Monday), July 8 (AP).—Domei (Japanese news agency) reported today in a dispatch from Hanoi that French Indo-China authorities seized all British vessels in Haipong yesterday.

Hongkong authorities said they were without confirmation of the report.

Only a short while before, British authorities lifted the ban on ship clearances for French Indo-China which had been imposed last week, pending clarification of the French colony's attitude toward Britain.

District Units Open Camps For Children

Contingents Leave Today for Vacations At Summer Places

A considerable movement of Washington children to fresh air and health-building camps began yesterday and continues today.

Thirty children ate lunch at the Volunteers of America Mission, 471 Pennsylvania avenue northwest, at noon yesterday and then left in automobiles for a camp sponsored by the Volunteers at Treasure Cove, Md. Their first surprise there was a display of fireworks. They were welcomed by Mrs. Lillian Ulrey, camp director.

The first contingent of 88 boys and girls who will go to Camp Bennett this season will leave the Central Union Mission, 624 Indiana avenue northwest, at 9:30 a.m. today. The camp is near Brookeville, Montgomery County, Md. It is conducted by the mission for boys from 6 to 9, and girls 6 to 14.

Mrs. Elsie Benton, assistant cafeteria manager, Woodrow Wilson High School, will direct the camp this year.

A group of about 40, ages from 12 to 18, will leave today for Kamp Kahlert, Y. W. C. A. summer camp for girls near Sudley, Md., and a vacation on West River. Miss Florence Dunlap will be the director, assisted by Miss Louise Hatch, of Kansas City, as program director, and Miss Margaret Hamilton, in charge of water activities.

Girls from 8 to 16 will leave for Camp Kateri of The Christ Child at 10:30 a.m. today, from Christ Child House, 608 Massachusetts avenue northeast. Miss Anna J. Veady, executive secretary, said:

"While the Christ Child Farm for Convalescent Children and the Settlement House are primarily supported by the Community Chest, the operation of the girls' camp is, in the main, dependent on the generosity of interested members and friends."

The cost of maintaining a child a week in camp is $8.50, it was said.

The Merrick Boys Camp, sponsored by the Merrick Boys Club, 608 Massachusetts avenue northeast, is scheduled to open today. A group of 40 boys, with members of the camp staff, have been getting the camp, located at Maryland Point, Md., in readiness. The closing date is September 2. About 325 boys are expected to attend during the season.

Summer in Washington—

Wonders of Nature Revealed to Wide-Eyed Youngsters and Parents in Park Tours

STUDYING NATURE—Joan and John Mesch and their parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Mesch, head nature lovers on their trip yesterday along the C. & O. Canal

The whole H. C. Mesch family—father, mother and two children—found several simultaneous secrets along the tow path of the Chesapeake and Ohio Canal yesterday.

A "nature walk," sponsored by National Capital Parks, revealed secrets about trees and shrubs which would be unnoticed by the casual eye. And at the same time, the Mesches discovered ways of keeping two lively youngsters entertained with subjects that don't grow stale.

Under big straw hats, the Mesch children, Joan, 9, and John, 7, followed Donald Edward McHenry, park naturalist, down the path from the outing's starting point, Stop No. 30 on the Cabin John car line. Fifty persons and an inquisitive dog trailed along—pausing attentively when Naturalist McHenry with his combination of Irish humor and scientific lore introduced them to an unfamiliar plant.

The young Mesches felt like explorers—it was their first such outing here—and the naturalist's remarks heightened the effect for them:

"Here is a wild yam, used by the Indians as a source of food . . ."

Joan's and John's eyes shone. Midway of their concerted twinkles, Mrs. Mesch remarked that she thought the children would join the Wednesday morning "junior nature outings" in Rock Creek Park. Mesch, who is chief safety engineer with the Soil Conservation Service, Department of Agriculture, beamed his approval of the children's interest in plant life. The Mesches live at 1580 East West highway, Silver Spring.

Another family group was in transit along the trail—Bob Brown, 13, and his parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Brown, of 1362 Hamilton street northwest. Bob is an old-timer at National Capital Park's outings (he sometimes goes on three a week during the summer), but his eagerness matched that of the Mesch newcomers.

Naturalist McHenry plucked a "jewel weed" and explained how it looks silvery under water. Bob promptly borrowed one of the leaves from him, in order to try it out in person. Bob's going to be a scientist himself.

Along the path, the crowd jostled, youngsters and elders alike voicing their wonder at the duckweed which McHenry dipped up from the canal in a small bottle. One of the smallest flowering plants (with blossoms only one thirty-second of an inch across), it surprisingly belongs to the same family as the calla lily, McHenry said.

He pointed out the giant ragweed—responsible for much hay fever—and exonerated the goldenrod from blame "because its pollen is sticky" and therefore isn't blown about by the wind.

With such assorted information, the crowd ended the two-hour excursion—talking about plans for next Sunday's outing, a walk at 8:30 a. m. at Kenilworth Aquatic Gardens.

Along with the trips every Sunday during the summer, campfire programs are held at 8 p. m. each Friday in the picnic grove in Rock Creek Park near Sixteenth and Kennedy streets northwest. Movies or colored slides are shown, along with travel talks.

The junior nature outings from 9:30 to 11:30 a. m. each Wednesday will bring a "leaf hunt" this week at Pierce Mill, with an insect hunt scheduled for July 24 on the Rock Creek Nature Trail.

Presbyterians Honor Church's First Sexton

Doors Dedicated To Late Wm. Collier At Covenant Edifice

Led by Dr. Albert J. McCartney, pastor, more than 700 members of Covenant-First Presbyterian Church yesterday helped dedicate iron-grilled doors to the church's first sexton, the late William Collier, who died June 10.

Massing in front of the church at Eighteenth and N streets and Connecticut avenue northwest, following morning services, they heard Dr. McCartney pay tribute to the retired sexton, and recall that it was just five years ago that Elmer Collier, his son, also sexton, died.

Billy Collier, 8-year-old son of George Collier, present sexton, and grandson of William Collier, clipped the ribbon on the doors.

Dr. McCartney introduced George, Tunis, Joseph, John and Annie Collier, sons and daughter of William Collier, and Katherine, 6-year-old daughter of George Collier.

The doors dedicated yesterday are at the south entrance, while similar doors near the N street side were dedicated last March 31 to the late Elmer Collier.

Reward Offered For Finding Body Of Drowned Youth

Maryland State police last night announced the posting of a $25 reward for recovery of the body of James Pannill, 20-year-old Washingtonian, who disappeared Saturday after diving into the Potomac from a rowboat at Colonial Beach.

More than a dozen craft had spent the day dragging the river for the youth, a graduate of Eastern High School, who lived at 245 Twelfth street northeast. The reward was announced by Pvt. Vernon Butler.

Search halted yesterday for the body of William Henry Young, 60-year-old retired ironworker, of 4036 K street northwest, who disappeared over the side of a fishing boat on the Potomac River near Quantico, Va., Friday night.

State police and marines, who had joined in the search, gave up after dragging the river Saturday and yesterday.

Ringside Table

With Mary Harris

THE SPIRIT OF ST. LOUIS is now flying around Del Rio. For Roy Bradford and his band, fresh from St. Louis (and Kansas City, too) are now rolling out honeyed rhythms from the Del Rio bandstand. Roy leads from the violin, is an able exponent and that new-type dance music with the streamlined glitter. There's also a gingery new singer, Bonnie Fleming. Del Rio's week-end customer convention gave a unanimous and hearty vote of approval to Bradford and Bonnie and their bandstand platform.

MILLIONAIRES' MUSIC begins today at Mayfair. The new Gene Bari Trio comes direct from Palm Springs, Calif., a begilded resort inhabited exclusively by movie stars and assorted magnates and tycoons. Bend an ear to Gene and find out the sort of melody preferred by the Astors, Rockefellers, et al.

SIZZLIEST SPOT at the World's Fair, 1940, is Billy Rose's Barbary Coast, just opened this season. Your columnist spent two enchanted and dumbfounded hours in this deadfall. The bar was packed four and five deep, all tables taken and aisles filled with a surging overflow "looking around" . . . the corniest entertainers in the world held forth on top of the bar. But they were good and loud. Our wan little waiter chirped, "I know that big girl canary from my short pants days. She used to sing on the New Bedford boat 30 years ago. Gee, but people push me around. And I haven't got strength enough to push back" . . . And the crowd! Sailors and silver foxes, Broadway babes and old ladies from Duluth, show people from nearby concessions, racketeers and school teachers—all singing, chattering, flirting, tap dancing, shouting and occasionally attracting the bouncers' services. That's the Barbary Coast. P. S.—You'll enjoy the B. C. signs. One of them read, "Come In and Try Our Slo Gin Fizzes. Only 100 to a Customer."

DANGER! AND PATENTED. When another dance team tried that St. Clair and Day (Shoreham Terrace) special whirl, the girl was killed. It was pretty unwise of them to infringe on this whirl with sudden death. For one thing, it's patented by St. Clair and Day and, more important, it depends entirely on centrifugal force. One slip and there you are, in front of the Golden Gates.

SIDE LINES. Jim Duff, of Arthur Herbert's Orchestra on the Starlight Roof, is a master woodworker. Give him a jig-saw and he'll make you a Victorian what-not any afternoon . . . Nate Beeskin, of Rod Raffell's Nightingale Band, is giving Blackstone what-for at the Washington of Law . . . Russ Cullen, golden tenor of the Rainbow Room, is also a postgraduate putterer. He can paint, lay bricks, do cement work and mow the lawn. (And was he embarrassed when visitors recently found him mowing the lawn in his stocking feet!) . . .

NEPTUNE SATELLITES. Blond Jack Conner, of Milt Herth's Trio in the Neptune Room, was a child prodigy before he became a grown-up prodigy on drums, vibraphone and marimba . . . And pianist-arranger Morty Jacobs has done many an arrangement for Count Basie and Paul Whiteman.

SWEET AS SUGAR CANE. Lounge Riviera. The retarded lilt and lift that Harriet Derck gives to "You Were There." Harriet's songs are making Riviera corners the town's favorite listening posts.

Madrillon. That crisp flutter of the ivories as Carr and Don go into their double piano specials. Listen to them do "Tea for Two" with plenty of sugar and cream and never a slice of lemon.

LINDA CARROLL, who starts caroling today in the King Cole Room

Lotus. Buddy Shaner's romancing in tenor, always perfectly attuned to his audience. Buddy never croons and never blasts, though he likes to yodel once in a while. You'll like his version of "Imagination."

NEW BAVARIAN. Those lush Viennese waltzes played by the Heintze Brothers, who hot-footed it out of their native Vienna when the Nazi troops goose-stepped at its gates. They know all the waltzes of this now "Never-Never City."

CANARY CHIRPS. Gerry Bennet, new singer at the Hi Hat, is a New York lass, for all that naive look of hers. She's also sung in Florida . . . Eileen George, of the Anchor Room, is verra happee because her father is making a splendid recovery from serious illness. Eileen goes home to Baltimore every week-end . . . Adele Van, the toast of Glen Echo, has a birthmark. Maybe she'll show it to you if you ask her politely. It's on her little finger.

QUIET, PLEASE! Looking for a refuge from headlines and political arguments? Then step right into the Harring Tavern, where it's cool and shady and the waiters step quietly as mice when they bring out those big frosted juleps . . . Or you can slide into Dick's Grill, where tiny hostess Minnie Corn will guide you to a softly lighted table and the pale ale is chilled with the greatest care . . . Or you can drive out to Lee's Stables and refresh yourself while gazing quietly over the park . . . Soothing, too, is a plantation dinner on the airy veranda at O'Donnell's Farms.

TEDDY'S OFF TO HOLLYWOOD. Teddy, the polished headwaiter of the Mayflower Lounge, is going to vacation in Hollywood and renew friendships he made when he was in the silent movies. You didn't know Teddy was a former movie actor? Why, he has a regular Barrymore profile; in fact, a lot better than the 1940 "Great Profile" . . . John La Ricos, Teddy's understudy, will greet Mayflower Loungers for the next few weeks.
